MEAT ON THE WING

Chickens are playing an important part in feeding our armed forces.

According to a recent estimate of the Department of Agriculture, 13,000,000 tons of chicken meat will be required for all uses this year.

This immense requirement presents a profitable and patriotic opportunity to many people not now contributing to the war effort. Raising chickens is quite simple, and only a small investment is required to get started. Large space is unnecessary, since chickens of these scientific days need never leave the coop.

Crew Forced Sick Marines to Unload Supplies, Charge

AKRON —(AP)— The Beacon-Journal says in a copyrighted story the navy is investigating reports ailing Marines were forced to unload their own supplies when the crew of a merchant ship lying off beleaguered Guadalcanal island refused to work on Sunday because of union regulations.

The Beacon - Journal's story, published in yesterday's editions, quoted six Guadalcanal veterans as declaring the Marines had to take over the Sunday work after the crewmen worked two hours on Saturday and then laid off until Monday morning.

The newspaper did not disclose the identity of the veterans, but said the information came from three Marines, two sailors, and a navy pilot on individual visits to Akron.

The navy pilot, the paper said, termed the incident the "worst scandal of the war" and said the crew refused to unload supplies because of National Maritime union rules against working on Sunday.

The paper said the veterans' stories "have been put up to naval

CLOSING CASE

State Winding Up Testimony Against Errol Flynn.

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — The state neared the close of its case today in the trial of Actor Errol Flynn on three counts of statutory rape.

Among witnesses the district attorney's deputies said were yet to be called was Capt. Owen Cathcart-Jones, veteran RCAF flier and former technical adviser on aviation pictures, identified in previous testimony as a friend of Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16, chief complaining witness against the actor.

Peggy's sister, Mrs Mickey June Norris, said the flying captain was a frequent visitor at their apartment while she was living with her sister in Hollywood, that he gave Peggy a dress, slacks and shoes, and that "once or twice" he gave her a small amount of money while both sisters were unemployed.

Army Officials at Loss To Explain Accident That Killed 35 Americans.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — A special board of army air forces officers today was investigating the circumstances surrounding the nation's worst airplane accident which took the lives of 35 Americans, including Author Eric Knight, in Dutch Guiana on Jan. 15.

Army officials were at a loss to explain why the huge four-motored army transport plane carrying the 35 persons—many prominent U. S. officials—crashed into the South American jungles.

Maj. Gen. Harold L. George, chief of the army's air transport command, in the announcement of the crash said that "as far as we know the weather was O. K.," indicating that adverse weather conditions did not cause the accident.

George also praised the plane's crew as "one of the best that ever

MINERS LOSE $2,000,000

Few Remain Away From Work, Ask White House: 'What Have We to Gain?'

BULLETIN

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—(U.P.)—The No. 7 Colliery local of the Susquehanna Colliers Co., voted today to return to work in compliance with President Roosevelt's order to end the anthracite strike started Dec. 30.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa — (U.P.) — Five-sixths of 12,000 anthracite miners whom President Roosevelt had ordered to end their strike were back at work today.

Only 2,400 carried the strike—for elimination of a 50 cents a month dues increase and a $2 a day wage raise—into a 23rd day.

The miners remaining on strike were members of the No 7 colliery local of the Susquehanna Company and Exeter Mine local of the Payne Coal company.

The No. 7 colliery local met today to reconsider its stand, but the Exeter local was adamant. It announced it had sent a telegram to the White House, asking, "what have we to gain by going back to work?"

Members of the Exeter local complained additionally that Mr. Roosevelt's back to work order to them had not been signed by him. They meet Monday afternoon to hea Mr Roosevelt's reply to their message, if he makes one.

Mr Roosevelt's deadline for ending the strike was noon yesterday, but thus far he had taken no punitive action toward those who defied him, probably because the majority obeyed The White House announced that he was gratified and expected the others to be back shortly.

The United Mine Workers of America (Independent), however, went ahead with its plan to punish workers who did not obey Mr. Roosevelt. The UMW had threatened expulsion from the union—which meant that the miners

Now OPA Will Know How Quiz Sheets Look to Public.

NEW YORK —(INS)— OPA officials who neglected to state "answer in English," today were biting their nails in the awful anticipation that they will receive 5,000 questionnaires—filled out in Chinese.

The questionnaires, part of a mailing to all laundries dispatched with a view to establishing price ceilings, were sent to the 5,000 Chinese laundries together with a set of instructions translated into Chinese by the Chinese Benevolent association.

Lacking interpreters of its own, the OPA fears that it will have to call upon the benevolent association once more if the forms are returned with Chinese characters.

Check on Window Smashing at Store Near Scene of Murder

Police today were investigating the breaking of a window in the Peter Such grocery, 328 Grace street, last night, in front of the one-room cabin where George Marginean, 65, a recluse, was killed last Sept. 25. His murder is still unsolved.

Police said today, however, that they had no evidence that would link the window-breaking episode with the murder.

Such told officers that his wife Sophia was awakened about 2 a. m. by the noise of crashing glass but decided the sound came from a nearby freight dock. When the store was opened, it was discovered that a buried brick had broken a 12-inch hole in a display window glass.

Marginean was found clubbed to death on a bed in his home last fall when Mrs. Such and a son visited his humble cottage with food for the aging man. Marginean lived quietly, with no constant companions, police were told, but efforts were made to find a "tall thin" stranger who had been seen in the neighborhood.

Detectives were baffled in their search for a motive and could not find the club which had been used to crush Marginean's skull. He had lived here about 15 years, following 10 years of railroad labor at Willard after coming to the United States from Rumania, now Axis-occupied, where he still had sons.

One possible piece of evidence found at the murder scene was submitted to the Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratories for analysis and a complete report is on file in the detective bureau here.

A girl and two boys were awarded the scholastic honors at class day exercises held this afternoon for Mansfield Senior high school's January graduating class of 85 seniors, the last mid-year class to be graduated from the school.

First honors went to Dorothy Hainer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo F. Hainer, 298 Dudley avenue. Robert Fox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fox 26 Hoffman avenue, won second honors, and William Beam, son of Mr and Mrs. Lydon H Beam, Park avenue west, received third honors.

Honorable mention recognition was given eight seniors, Donald Sprecker Lois Senert, Barbara McDowell Lois Casto, Anna Knapp, Etabel Hunter, David Brunk and Ardith Murray.

Tapped for membership in the National Honor society were Brunk, the Misses Hainer, Hunter, Knapp, McDowell, Senert, Norma Dent and Margery Hegnauer.

Membership in the society is based on qualifications of character, service, leadership and scholarship.

The three top honor winners have been active in high school affairs. Miss Hainer has been news editor of the "Hyphonerian," school paper for the past year. She is now employed in the research department of the Humphryes Manufacturing company. A commercial student, Fox has been employed as purchasing clerk at the Farm Tools, Inc and has assisted V. D. Awards were presented this year by the Victory Corps council which replaces the Student Representative council which gave such awards for the past several years. Miss Hainer also was given the Latin and radio awards and Beam was presented the science award. In the commercial field, Miss Senert won the honor and

Earlier, a spokesman of the inter-Allied supreme command, broadcasting in French over the BBC, warned the population of occupied France today that their territory would become a theater of war operations.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (AP) — British light naval forces attacked the harbor of Tripoli Tuesday night and sank an Italian submarine, the admiralty announced today.

(By Associated Press)

British shock troops were reported to have swept through the main defense works of Tripoli in the climactic battle of Libya today, while on the Soviet front the German high command indicated that the end was near for Nazi divisions trapped before Stalingrad.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters said Russian troops attacking from the west had broken through the lines of the German "defenders of Stalingrad"—the beleaguered force described by the Russians as the remnants of 22 Nazi divisions.

Soviet dispatches have said that the German siege armies originally numbering 220,000 men had been tightly engulfed in the Don-Volga corridor and whittled down to less than 50,000.

Admitting the desperate plight of its troops for the first time, the Nazi command said:

"The German group in the Stalingrad area, which is closely encircled by the enemy and which is offering tenacious resistance to strong enemy pressure, had to wage heavy fighting yesterday against the Soviets, who are storming with far superior forces."

The German war bulletin said that "despite heroic defense," the imperilled Nazis reeled back several kilometers amid bitter hand-to-hand fighting.

On the North African front, columns of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British 8th army were reported by a British broadcast to be storming at the gates of Tripoli, with their big guns in position to pour destruction into the already bomb-blackened city.

Parts of the Axis citadel were reported aflame and much of the civilian population was being evacuated.

The British command asserted that some of the fleeing Axis forces had withdrawn as far as 25 miles inside Tunisia from Libya.

Heavy fighting was also in progress in central Tunisia, suggesting that a showdown battle was developing for the last Axis foothold in north Africa.

The British radio said British field guns were now in positions "on a height commanding the city and harbor of Tripoli, whose main defense works have already fallen."

Italian headquarters said vio-

FORAY: Allied Planes Smash Jap Cruiser at Amboina Base

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A lone Japanese plane bombed the American base island of Espiritu Santo in the Solomons Thursday, the navy reported today, in the first enemy air action directed against that New Hebrides operations center.

(By International News Service)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—Heavy Allied bombers have blasted a Japanese cruiser at the Jap-occupied Netherlands East Indies naval base of Amboina and when last seen the warship was listing and heavy smoke was pouring from it an official communique said today.

Hits were scored simultaneously on a 5,000-ton Jap merchant vessel and two other Japanese cargo ships were seriously damaged by a force of heavy and medium bombers which attacked the harbor of Rabaul of New Britain island.

During the assault on Amboina, which lies 660 miles north of Port Darwin, Australia, and formerly was the second largest naval base in the Dutch East Indies, a force of 20 Japanese Zero fighters intercepted the Allied raiders. Two of the enemy planes were destroyed and several others damaged. All of the Allied craft got away safely.

Low-level attacks were made before dawn against shipping in the harbor of Rabaul.

"At least two medium merchant vessels with estimated tonnage of 2,000 and 6,000 tons each, were seriously damaged," the communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said.

The 6,000-ton ship was damaged

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

MARY'S HEAD went up spiritedly at Noel's angry accusation, and I knew a caustic retort was on her lips, for Mary does not take rebukes meekly. But I also knew that a fire of anger was burning in Noel which must not be fed by any show of wifely resentment.

Finding Redfield on their floor the very next day after the swinish exhibition for which Noel had knocked the actor senseless had driven Mary's husband again to the brink of murderous anger.

"You are mistaken Noel," I said, hoping the recording angel was not keeping too strict an eye on me. "Redfield primarily wanted to see me, and I suppose he found out I was here through one of Mr. Milner's telephone 'listing posts,' for I am sure my father did not tell him."

Madge Quiets Noel

Some of the savage tenseness left Noel's face, but with unerring accuracy he aimed at my one vulnerable word.

"You say he primarily wanted to see you," he said. "I suppose secondarily he wanted to talk to Mary."

"Yes, he did," I assented, trying to make my voice nonchalant, "but if he had found me at my own apartment, he would not have tried to see Mary I am sure."

"He has colossal gall," Noel said after a pause, "to come to you for anything, Aunt Madge, after staging what he did last night in your apartment."

Next he put the terse question, "What did he want?"

I braced myself to answer so as not again to rouse his murderous anger against Redfield.

"You know that Dr. Twitchell told your father it would be inadvisable for Redfield to go on tonight," I parried.

"Yes. And I wish I'd hit him harder, so he wouldn't be able to go back at all."

"Well," I went on, "when Redfield was told that, and that John Hayes was to take his role tonight, he was wild with jealousy and unreasoning fear that Hayes was going to steal his role for good. So he hunted me up and asked me to intercede with your father to scrap Hayes and permit Redfield to go on tonight."

"The unspeakable cad!" Noel said. "He'd sell his own mother if it would help him in his career."

Explains About Guard

"Of course neither Mary nor I could do anything to help him, and we both refused to speak to your father."

"I gather that he turned ugly. I see you had a guard here, or I suppose he is a guard."

"He is," I answered. "I arranged with my father to send one over when Steve, after trying to get me at my own apartment, telephoned me here that he wished to talk to me. He had sounded so furious I felt that he was dangerous. But I was able to calm Steve down, and he went away quietly."

"And then," Noel said with self-reproach, "I had to jump in and make a spectacle of myself!"

This was a good mood in which to leave him with Mary. I knew she would be able to manage him, and I had two or three holes to plug so that the story I had told Noel of Stephen's wishing to see me primarily should be safe from his discovery that it was false.

"I think it was Steve who presented the spectacle," I said. "He was frightened nearly out of his wits. And now I must go along."

"I'll see you about the party for Georges tonight," I said, as I closed the door after me.

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, January 23.

A day in which high tension and excitement and commotion may be found in a very determined effort to place the future and its fortunes on sound, secure and enduring foundation. All the physical energies and mental faculties should be concentrated toward this end.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of much high pressure, tension, excitement and perhaps agitation, with the energies and faculties all keyed up to high purpose in securing a future of solidity, responsibility and security. This solid foundation may be laid by overcoming a sudden visitation, threatening to disrupt, disintegrate, and the radical uprooting of the most cherished plans and purposes.

A child born on this day may have splendid equipment for outstanding success of a constructive and enduring worth, although it may be subject to sudden reversals and upheavals.

Gripping Drama.

Vivid drama and exciting romance are blended in "The Moon and the Sixpence," Somerset Maugham's famous story, opening Saturday at the Madison with George Sanders in the leading role. Herbert Marshall, Doris Dudley, Elena Verdugo and Eric Blore head the cast in this unusual picture about a wealthy banker who abandoned his family and society to become an artist and defy convention. His adventures take him from London's fashionable West End to a Parisian garret and finally to the magic beauty of the South Seas. "Wrecking Crew," the second picture, has Richard Arlen and Chester Morris.

Western Feature.

"Border Roundup," the Ritz attraction, is an outdoor drama in which three range buddies are kept busy trying to stay a few jumps ahead of the sheriff while keeping an eye on a gang of bandits. George Houston, Al St. John and Smoky Moore play the trio and Patricia Knox strikes the romantic note. Dana Andrews and Virginia Gilmore have the leads in "Berlin Correspondent," the co-feature dealing with an American newspaper correspondent in Europe who falls into the clutches of Hitler's gestapo.

Comedy Drama.

Challenged to go out and earn his own living a young son of the rich becomes involved with a gangland crime through no fault of his own in "Highways By Night," the Park attraction. Later he discovers how plain people work in the operation of a modest trucking business. Richard Carlson and Jane Randolph top the cast in this Clarence Budington Kelland story and the players include Jane Darwell and Barton MacLane. "Trail Riders," the co-feature, presents the Range Busters.

TRUE SATISFACTION

NOTHING is more satisfying to a dyed-in-the-wool real bridge sportsman than to have his opponents make things as difficult as possible for him and yet find himself thwarting every mean artifice they use to confound him. That can mean so much more than mere muddling through to your contract, making errors which give the enemy a chance to beat you but being lucky to have them miss their opportunities.

As soon as the diamond K was led and he saw that dummy, South decided to work on the spade suit. So he won the first trick with the diamond A and led the spade 2, intending to finesse twice. That was all to the merry, but West cut in with his K and forced the A. The J then was called, the Q winning, the diamond 10 being cashed and the diamond 5 being ruffed by South's heart 8.

Counting then on using the heart Q as a third round entry to dummy to play the spades, he led the K as a tempter. West ducked that. If he then took the J, that would make it easy to run the spade suit for club discards, but also ducked it, whereupon the Q covered from dummy. The spade 10 was led, the club 4 being discarded, and West saw he was licked. If he did not use his trump A here, another club could be discarded on the next spade. So he ruffed the heart A.

Having nothing left but diamonds and clubs, he couldn't help give declarer his game. If he led a diamond, the dummy would ruff and a club be discarded, after which the club finesse would work. So he led his club 9. The K covered, the A took, the Q was cashed and the 6 was ruffed in the dummy. South had two hearts left for the last two tricks, spreading them with a happy smile, as he was "home."

COUNTY VICTORY BOOK DRIVE TO START FEB. 1

Library, Red Cross and USO Join Forces in Drive For Reading Material.

The second annual Victory book campaign to obtain reading material for America's armed forces will get under way in Mansfield and Richland county, Feb. 1, under the point auspices of the Mansfield Public Library, Richland county chapter of the Red Cross and United Service Organization.

Only the best books will be sought and emphasis will be placed on quality not quantity this year, according to Miss Lois MacKellar, city librarian, who is handling the drive. G. W. Harmony, principal at Johnny Appleseed Junior high school, represents the Red Cross on the committee and Miss Emma Waring the USO.

No house-to-house canvass will be made as heretofore due to the curtailment of transportation, Miss MacKellar said, and an entirely new plan of collection will be put into effect.

All organizations in the city and county will be asked to designate one meeting as a Victory book meeting and at this time all members of the respective groups will each be asked to contribute a book. In this way the committee hopes to obtain a better selection of books than was possible under the previous plan.

The American Association of University Women will be requested to resume the responsibility of notifying each Mansfield organization regarding the plan, Miss MacKellar said. The association will also be asked to urge each group to make its own delivery of books to the library.

Individuals not contributing to the cause through the organization method may take their books directly to the library where a carton will be placed to receive donations.

Only books in good physical condition will be accepted in the drive and the county committee is urged by the national Victory book campaign headquarters to be "ruthless in discarding" soiled or unsuitable material.

Based on preferences made by the army and navy the books particularly wanted in the coming campaign are "best sellers," dating back not further than 1930, both in popular fiction and nonfiction.

Adventure and western stories are among the type of books most sought and widely read by the service men according to camp librarians. Detective and mystery fiction are also on the wanted list.

Technical books, published since 1935, in the fields of mathematics, electricity, radio, aeronautics and many other subjects are in demand but donors are asked to discard all grade, high school and college text books with the exception of very few such as language books.

Humorous books, cartoons, and game books are also on the preferred list as well as pocket books and other small-sized editions.

First Nurses In Ranks of Navy

MISS SPRIESTERBACH — MISS BEAM

First nurses from General hospital to go into army service are Miss Maryellen Spriesterbach and Miss Margaret Beam, shown here. They reported Jan. 16 at Fort Knox, Ky. Both were Red Cross nurses in Mansfield. They were commissioned first lieutenants when they entered army service. Miss Spriesterbach, whose home is in Lincoln Heights, was graduated at the hospital in 1937 and formerly was secretary to Dr. Charles Shafer. Miss Beam's home is near Galion, but she has been employed at the hospital. The hospital has several other nurses in ranks of the navy.

COLUMBUS TYPIST RISKS LIFE TO COLLECT SPIDER WEBS FOR ARMY

COLUMBUS—(ANS)—One of the war's unsung heroines is senior typist Armada Ruffner, employe of the engineers supply section of the Columbus Quartermaster depot. This young woman does things the American way, without fanfare, without extra recompense and at the risk of serious injury, if not death.

Miss Ruffner takes web from black widow spiders so that the technicians of the optical instrument repair department of the depot may have a continuous supply of material for sighting cross-hairs.

The engineers were getting web from an eastern optical manufacturer at $6.50 a frame (a frame holds enough web for approximately 20 cross-hair installations) when Miss Ruffner first went to work for the government. The demand for cross-hair was more than the one source could supply and the fragile material was no longer available. After consulting Dr. W. M. Barrows, of the department of zoology of Ohio State university, Miss Ruffner assumed responsibility for supplying the needed webs.

Dr. Barrows went to southern Ohio and brought back five lively and lethal, black widow female spiders. Because she had found that they are one of the few spider species which can be relied upon to produce a web of uniform size and of serviceable strength, the typist chose Black Widows with complete disregard for personal danger.

Miss Ruffner's job does not require her to supply the web. She just feels that, so long as she can supply it, she is doing something for her country in a time when too few are making any effort at all.

Miss Ruffner could have set up a little business on the side with her spiders and could have supplied the web at the current market price, but that isn't her way of doing things.

She takes a long chance to gather the stuff and the only cost to the government is her time away from her typewriter and the fly-a-day rations alloted to the five lethal sisters in the spider cages. That's her idea of the American way.

WPB Gets New Substitute for Sponge Rubber

COLUMBUS — (ANS) — A new substitute for sponge rubber has been turned over to the War Production board by R. W. Whidden, president of a Chicago surgical dressing firm, at which it was discovered.

Widden announced it could be used free of royalties by any company manufacturing for the war effort.

Dr. Maxwell Strong, a native of Wooster and a graduate of Ohio State university and Dr. Marguerite Naps, 29, red-haired chemist of Milwaukee, are the discoverers.

Whidden said he believed the new product would do much to relieve the drain on the nation's dwindling rubber stock pile. It can be used to line tanks, pad airplane cockpits, pad helmets, fill seat cushions, made de-icers for airplane wings and mattresses for hospitals, he said.

The new product is a result of combining resin, derived from soybean and corn oil with an acid and other chemicals.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 17 — RETURNS BY PERSONS ABROAD

Federal income tax returns for the calendar year 1942 must be filed not later than midnight of March 15, 1943. However, individuals who during any period of time after December 6, 1941, have been continuously outside the Americas for more than 90 days, are allowed an extension of time to file a return, amounting to such period plus 90 days.

A like extension applies to the payment of tax, and to the statute of limitations in the case. Moreover, military and naval personnel in service outside the continental United States, or on sea duty, and American citizens in enemy occupied territory, are permitted to defer the filing of a return until their return to the United States or until the close of the war.

Earnings from employment and personal services outside the United States, for periods longer than six months during the year, are exempt from taxation unless the employer is the United States or an agency of the United States. The period of foreign employment need not be continuous, but if broken, only calendar months are to be considered in determining the 6-month period.

A calendar month is defined as a period terminating with the day of the succeeding month numerically corresponding to the day of its beginning, less one; thus, from May 15 to June 14 would be a calendar month.

Fractional parts of a month from several months may not be added to make whole calendar months, since whole calendar months must consist of consecutive days of absence from the United States in any one trip.

The term "United States" means the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia. It should be noted that if income is exempt because earned abroad, expenses incurred in earning this income may not be taken as a deduction in the return.

Shows Farmers How to Protect Ohio Wildlife

COLUMBUS — (AP) — A. W. Short, chief of the game management section, Ohio Division of Conservation, has planned four displays to show Farmers' week visitors at Ohio State university, Jan. 26-28, methods of protecting game birds and animals from hunger.

Short said the annual Ohio game crop was especially important today because of the current meat shortage. Estimates made by Dr. Lawrence E. Hicks of the Ohio Wildlife Research station show that the weight of rabbits alone killed in this state in 1941 totalled 709,150 tons. Pheasants killed during the same year, roughly 610,000 of them, weighed about 915 tons; the squirrel crop of 1,800,000 approximately 1,350 tons, and waterfowl about 128 tons.

The Farmers' week exhibits will show how to set up feeding stations to help the seed stock of game animals and birds survive through the critical winter period.

CUBBERS PLAN FOR CONVENTION

Cubbers of the Johnny Appleseed area meeting Wednesday evening in the Boy Scout headquarters planned to stage a cubbers' convention in connection with the annual scouters' meeting, Feb. 27. At that time, a model den and pack program will be presented.

The meeting also honored den chiefs of the packs. During the business discussion the men voted to award each chief his den chief cord after serving for two months. Announcement was made that each issue of "Den! Den!" monthly publication of cubbers, would contain a page devoted to arrangements for a pack program. Fred Troll, deputy commissioner in charge of cubbing, presided.

THE BOY FROM MAINE

CHAPTER IX

Over her partner's shoulder she was looking for him, and she could not find him. This fact lent an extra edge of sharpness to her tone. Where had he gone, with whom was he dancing, why wasn't he standing alone somewhere, watching her? That was what she had supposed he would do, in this interval. That was what she would have done, if she had been a man.

It seemed to her now that she remembered too — or possibly it was just that she could so easily imagine, "All-American Fullback Sails for England to Enlist . . ."

"Well," she said. "What's the rest of it? The British army, and then what happened?"

"Then plenty happened. He was with them for the next year and a half . . ."

She listened to the end, almost not listening, and yet missing nothing. It was she who summed it up, when it was told. This was her last attempt at cynicism, and as such it failed completely. She sounded rather proud, as it came out.

"In other words," she said, "He did everything you'd except him to—expect get killed in action."

"And he damned near did that. Especially those two times—"

"You told me. Well, and so then," she said, "when our army caught up with him, he switched over—is that it?"

"That's it."

"What's he doing here now?"

"Instructing. They sent him back a couple of months ago. He's out at Devens."

"Oh. For long?"

The lieutenant did not know.

She was aware that there was little fight left in her, and the moments passed, and still he did not come, and still she could not find him; and this inexplicable interval subdued her even more. The dance tunes and her partners changed, and surely it had been a quarter of an hour at least and now she could not even talk for wondering where he was. Part of her mind debated possibilities which were absurd; she knew they were absurd—he had not left, and he had not lost interest. He was just trying to make her think he had, she thought contemptuously. He was just playing a little game — but it was such a high-school sort of game, and so unworthy of him, that she still wondered.

Then suddenly she saw him; he was back; he was re-entering the room from somewhere, and his eyes were hunting for her even as he came; and in her immense relief and her triumphant reassurance she thought, "Let him worry now!"—because he had not seen her yet. And she said quickly to her partner, "Let's go out."

There was a doorway to a corridor at hand, and she stopped dancing as she spoke, and led the way, her partner following with alacrity. He chanced to be a naval aviator—name unknown, and optimistic nature unsuspected until now. He was much pleased and flattered—he was much mistaken, in a word and now when Rosalie halted in the vacant corridor, and turned a laughing face to him, he said ardently, "Yes, good idea! Let's get a breath of air. Where shall we go? I've got a car here, if you'd like to take a little ride? Or there's a garden."

Really, he was touching, Rosalie thought; and she was gentle with him. She made enormous eyes, and said, "But what would people say?"

"What do we care? And anyway, how would they kn—"

"I have to care," said Rosalie demurely. "Being a married woman." She shook her head. "No—I can't leave. Much as I'd love to. As a matter of fact, what I've got to do instead is find a dressing room, and fix this dress, before it falls to pieces. Do you mind? I mean, I suddenly felt something vital give while we were dancing . . ."

She was humming softly when she went into the dressing-room, through double doors and a short hallway lined with rods of evening wraps. She was amused—this was a silly little game, but he had started it, and two could play it. She would stay here as long as her impatience would permit. She began killing time from this first moment on, moving loiteringly across the room, stopping at one mirror to adjust a shoulder strap, and at another for a full length rear view, triply presented. There were several other girls and women in the dressing room, including two she knew.

She fixed her hair. She actually found a minute rent in the tulle dress, and the maid mended it. Ten minutes — twelve — fifteen? She made her face up freshly, first dumping all the contents of her handbag on the dressing table and arranging them in working order. She was quite beautiful tonight. She had good nights and better ones, and this was definitely a better one. Well, and it had to be. She thought that almost with humility, remembering him. Envisioning him again.

At the end of twenty minutes she was satisfied; it was enough; there was no more to do, and no use tarrying any longer. She gathered up her small belongings and restored them to her handbag with fingers suddenly urgent and a little tremulous. Having no change, she tipped the maid a dollar bill, and did not wait.

When she went toward the door, she had so strong a sense of expectation, and of imminence, and of momentousness, that all her breath seemed gone. What am I doing? she thought, and for an instant the shadow that was Phil was in her mind, and for an instant she felt sad and penitent and pitying, because she knew so well what she was doing, and could not even care.

She went swiftly. Then, in the hall outside, with the door falling shut behind her, she stopped short; and the next steps she took were leisured ones. She had not quite expected to find Bailey Harker waiting there, immediate as that, but now she thought she should have known. The beat that her heart skipped was recognition, not surprise.

"It's you again, is it," she said indifferently.

He was a little way away from her, diagonally across, and down. He had been idly examining a picture on the wall, and it was when he turned and saw her that she spoke. There were perhaps ten seconds before that, when she had time to notice many things—the way the land lay, just what the situation was, how many other people there were in the corridor, and how far off, a long way off—no one was near enough to overhear them, or to matter.

She had time to see his profile, and how his head was shaped—that was an angle that she hadn't seen before, to match the rest. He had to bend a trifle forward, though the picture was hung high. She watched him straighten up, and then come sauntering towards her.

He was smiling lazily, that same impudent smile, but with the difference that his eyes were sombre now — something had changed his mood, in some portentous and exciting way. She could guess what it was, even before his greeting told her.

"Mrs. Strange," he said deliberately, "—I believe."

They both stood still, being close together now. So, Rosalie thought, you didn't know before; and she glanced hard and quickly at him, to make sure that she had not been wrong about the way he felt, now that he did know.

She had not been wrong. That grimness in his eyes was not to be belied by lazy smiling and a bantering voice. It was still there, and now she read and analyzed it accurately. He looked annoyed, impatient, angry with her, for being married when he wanted her—and yet at the same time he was completely undismayed. He hadn't just accepted it, like other men. He wasn't going to.

Rosalie hid her own eyes now, veiling the exultant, laughing light that must be in them. She could relax; she could enjoy herself; she need not even help him. Everything could be safely left to arrogance like his.

She said coolly, "So you know my name, I wondered."

"Rather belatedly, I do. I know all about you."

"Oh, I doubt that."

"Give me time," he said. "I've done pretty well, in half an hour. And with very little co-operation from you, if I may remind you."

He looked mockingly severe, and Rosalie looked politely interested. "First you told me none of the things you should have told me," he said further, "and then you interrupted my interrogations of the public at large by running out on me—with the result that I've had to spend the past twenty minutes cooling my heels in this damn passage-way. What were you trying to do, anyway? Escape me? That was silly, as you see."

"'Escape' you?" Rosalie said wonderingly. "Is that really what you thought? Do you always assume that, whenever anyone leaves a dance floor where you are?"

"There you go again," he said. "I've never met such a sarcastic girl. I honestly don't see how your husband stands it, or why he puts up with it. He wouldn't like to divorce you, would he, by the way? No, I suppose not."

Even his eyes were smiling now, and so were hers. There was a little pause, during which he peered more closely at her, seeming to discover something that afforded him concern — something on her cheek, which now he flicked with his forefinger.

"What?" said Rosalie abstractedly.

"Powder."

Then he took her hand. Then he was grave, all of a sudden, making no pretense any more. "Look here," he said. "Let's be serious, here, for a minute. Are you in love with this fellow you married? You're not, are you."

It was a statement, not a question, in the end; and Rosalie said in a startled voice, "Did they tell you I wasn't?" That was her first thought.

"No," said Bailey Harker, looking quizzical again. "Don't be alarmed. They didn't tell me you weren't. I don't think they know."

"But I am, you see," Rosalie said, recovering. "I simply wondered where you could have got such an absurd idea."

"Preposterous, isn't it?"

"It is."

He nodded equably. "Tell me about him," he said. "Your husband. He's a fine boy, they all say. They did tell me that."

"They're quite right. He is."

"One of the very best."

"One of the very best," said Rosalie.

"And you're tremendously fond of him, of course."

"Of course I am."

"But you're not in love with him."

"Oh, now, really! It seems to me I've already answered that question."

"Yes," he said, "it seems to me you have. From the very start."

He was laughing at her; and while she stared at him—uncomprehendingly, she hoped, and coldly—he made a peremptory little sideways gesture with his head, towards the door of the dressing-room. "You should have brought your wrap," he said. "Now you'll have to go back and get it. I'm taking you out of here."

"You're what?"

"We can't talk here."

"But you're incredible!" Rosalie cried. "I'm not going anywhere with you. I came with somebody else, in the first place—and in the second place I hardly know you—"

"My name's Harker," he said imperturbably, "and I'm insane about you. That ought to be introduction enough—or if it isn't, it will have to do. Go get your wrap and stop your nonsense."

"I'll do nothing of the sort! I've never heard—"

"You will, though. Damn you," he said, "look up here. Look at me. Let me see your eyes."

"No," said Rosalie involuntarily.

Then she obeyed. She might as well, after that clear admission. She tilted back her head, so that her face was lifted to him, and when that was done she opened her eyes fully. "There," she said, intending to say, "I am looking at you," but not saying it. All her breath gave out again as soon as it was true.

He was affected too—there was a swift contraction of the muscles of his face, as if he had been actually physically struck. He said, "God, you're beautiful!" His low voice said it, and his eyes. And you, Rosalie thought. And you. I never saw anyone like you.

She looked away again, immediately, because this would not do—this was a glance not safe or sane to hold in public. She looked down, lowering her lashes suddenly; righting her tilted face. She heard him say, "You see the way it is," and she said, "Yes," but only in her mind. She made him wait. She loved prolonging moments like this moment . . . Not that there had ever been a moment quite like this.

She heard him say, "So will you get your wrap? Or shall I get it? Or shall I kiss you here?" he added warningly. "And now?"

You wouldn't dare, Rosalie thought, but she knew better. It made her smile a little, knowing that. She kept her eyelids lowered, feeling his eyes intent upon her face; letting him see how long and beautiful her lashes were, in case he had not seen. Her gaze was level with the line of colored ribbon on his breast, and now she touched it with her fingertip, tracing it lightly, all the way across. "For conspicuous gallantry and interpidity." . . . "For extraordinary heroism." . . . "For valour."

"You never lose, do you," she said; and she said softly, "Bailey Harker."

ou can't blame her, either She nt a lot of excitement on a t in "Gone With the Wind," played the daylights out of ther Belle named Watling, and ooked as if she were "in" at was a long time before she ized that producers couldn't associate the amply overstuffed Miss Watling with the delicate, 115-pound, porcelain-doll. Miss Munson. For her cinema advancement Miss Watling gave Miss alunson exactly nothing except the balm of praise.

Then it came again, that big chance Mother Gin-Sling in "The Shanghai Gesture." She played it in a tortuous make-up. She lost pounds and pounds, partly from the painful make-up, partly from fighting with Director Josef Von Sternberg in an effort to give some "character" to Mother Gin. I don't know if Ona's ideas were any better. They couldn't have been worse than what came out on the screen in one of the year's most ridiculous pictures.

"But I got a nice house with the money," she said, "and that's something"

Since then Ona has almost won a part in "The G-String Murders." Almost, I say, because when she went up to sign the contract they were so sorry—they'd thought she was taller.

She's one of those people that things happen to. On "Gesture" they shaved her forehead to accommodate a wig. Spirit gum infected the scalp, and treatment for the infection left her with a nice little bald spot. Testing her for another role, they made a plaster cast of her face. Removing the cast, they broke her nose.

So you can't blame her if she doesn't jump up and down about movies now.

GRANTS RAISE TO 17,000 IN TIMKEN PLANTS

WLB Approves Check-Off and Maintenance Clause; Order Lashed By Minority.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The war labor board today granted a 44-cent daily wage increase, retroactive to Feb. 15, 1942, to 17,000 workers at Timken Roller Bearing company plants in Columbus, Canton, Gambrinus and Wooster, Ohio.

The board also ordered the company to write provisions for maintenance of membership, check-off of union dues and a no-strike guarantee into a contract with the CIO's United Steel Workers union

The employer members of the WLB entered a dissenting opinion in the case attacking the wage grant, the retroactive date and the no-strike clause as ordered by the board majority

Denying the firm's request for a provision establishing a fine of $1,000 on the union for each day of a strike and a withdrawal of strikers' seniority rights, the WLB majority ordered the company and th union to co-operate in "disciplining any employe or employes who cause stoppages."

Dean Wayne L. Morse, a public member of the WLB, wrote the board's majority opinion and stated that the wage increase was intended to wipe out "manifest injustice" created by a similar wage increase granted steel plants in the area last summer by the WLB.

The minority opinion, however, asserted that the "real object is a five and one half cent hourly wage increase across the board for every member of the United Steel Workers."

The employer members declared that the WLB order making the wage increase retroactive to Feb 15 1942, instead of Aug. 23, 1942 when the company's contract expired, violated the "sanctity" of contract. The opinion stated.

"We do not believe it proper or wise for the WLB, whose power derives from the executive branch of the government to order the invalidation of any labor contract."

MARINE CITED AS TOP YOUNG MAN OF '42; COACH MENTIONED

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO — Private Paul C Smith 33 who rose from poverty to national prominence at the age of 30 then left a $9,000 a year job to enlist in the U. S Marine corps, held the distinction today of being named the "outstanding young man of 1942"

The title was conferred on Private Smith last night at the annual founder's day banquet of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce which made the award.

Paul Brown, 34, who stepped from a coaching job at Massillon, O., high school to coach Ohio State's football team, named by sports writers as the "team of the year," was among the top 10 selected.

Forced by poverty to leave school at the age of 11 Private Smith went to work as farmhand lumberjack and seaman At the age of 22 he entered the newspaper business and within 11 years served successively as managing editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, on the farm tenancy commission and the farm security board and as confidential secretary to former President Herbert Hoover

Commenting on declining a commission at lieutenant commander and resigning his $9,000 a year job with the Office of War Information to enlist in the marines, Private Smith declared.

"A hell of a lot of people have got to learn to win this war . . . how to use a bayonet. . . . There's nothing wrong with being a lieutenant commander except that I couldn't run a destroyer, which is what lieutenant commanders are supposed to do."

Private Smith was selected by the judges from a field of 10 designated as the "outstanding young men of 1942."

LEADERS SEE REVENUE LOSS AS TOO HIGH

Administration Ready to Balk at Submitting Change In Levy Law To Voters.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—A legislative proposal looking toward eventual lowering of real estate taxes on Ohio homes will be opposed by the Bricker administration on the ground that the loss of revenue to subdivisions would be prohibitive, tax department sources said today.

The proposal, introduced in the house of the 95th Ohio general assembly yesterday by Rep. George H Kirkpatrick, (R., Knox) would place before the voters in November a constitutional amendment which would, in effect, take real estate from the section of the law providing that all taxable property be taxed uniformly—or, in this instance, at its true value.

The joint resolution introduced by Kirkpatrick would have to be passed by a two-thirds vote of both houses to win a place on the November ballot. Its purpose was to provide for classification of real estate by the legislature after the amendment was passed by the electorate.

It is Kirkpatrick's apparent purpose to have real estate then classified as to residential or home property, farms, and industrial property, with homes being placed on a "preferential basis"

If preferential basis in this instance means that it be granted the same exemptions granted to other personal property by the voters in 1929, it will mean that taxes on real estate will be levied at 50 per cent of true value instead of at supposed true value, as under present statutes.

This, tax leaders pointed out, would mean a reduction of the tax duplicate of about one-fourth, on the basis that half of real estate property is used now for residential purposes.

If the tax value of homes were cut in half, as was done to tangible and intangible property after the voters in 1929 approved personal property taxation at 50 per cent of its true value, it would mean a possible loss to the local subdivisions of $42,500,000 a year, tax officials said.

Mansfield postal employes had about 500 less parcel post packages to handle this week as the result of the war department ruling concerning the mailing of all packages unless the sender could produce a written request for the package bearing the approval of the battalion commander. The order, issued to expand transportation for war materials, is expected to cut down outgoing parcel post by approximately 2,000 packages a month, Postmaster Herman E. Homberger said.

Asks Townships To Help Keep 'Em Rolling In Ohio

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Hal G. Sours, state highway director, called on Ohio township officials today to do their part in keeping transportation rolling despite anticipated loss of revenue for road maintenance

"Ohio highways are essential because materials and workers are transported over them to and from war plants," Sours said in an address prepared for delivery at the annual convention of the Ohio State Association of Township Trustees and Clerks.

Upkeep of secondary and farm-to-market roads is necessary, Sours said, despite loss of gasoline tax money as a result of fuel rationing.

Township roads are maintained from the three-cents-a-gallon Ohio tax on gasoline.

Joe R Thomas, of Hayesville, association president, told delegates yesterday the task of getting food from farms to the cities was the immediate problem confronting trustees.

This corner's No. 1 operative, Paul the Whizzer White, took a flying dash out to Shiloh the other eve for a quick gander at the Shiloh-Lucas county high school cage league tilt.

And if you were to corner the Whizzer (a neat job because I have yet to see the corner in which the rotund gentleman will fit) you will not have to beat him over the head to get him to admit that he is very enthusiastic indeed regarding the Drummer Boys from Shiloh, even though the Boys have yet to drum up a league victory.

The Whizzer insists that the Drummer Boys are beating it out in their own snappy style, and that they will add the jive touch to any basketball imbroglio in which they find themselves entangled.

"This is a coming team" says the Whiz Kid, "and the boys play basketball as though they enjoy it. And all this in spite of the fact that they have a problem, and there's not much they can do about solving this problem, but they go right on playing in their merry way, and they really expect to upset someone or other one of these fine evenings.

"The Drummer Boys lost their coach to the army away last fall, and for a while there was the question: To play or not to play? In fact Supt Elmer Joseph called the boys together and put this question to them"

And their answer, so the Whizzer relates, was "Why, shore, we'll play." And that's what they're doing in spite of the fact that they get only two practice sessions a week, since that's all the time Joseph can spare from his other duties for coaching activity.

"First thing I saw when I went into the Shiloh dressing room," White tells me, "was a picture of your ugly mug hanging on the wall, with a clipping where you reported that the Shilohs have come along on even rating with the other teams in this well-balanced county league, as capable of springing an upset or two.

"And, do you know?" says Whizzer, "those kids really believed that clipping. They weren't a bit awe-stricken by the fact that they were playing the undefeated Lucas team."

White also relays the information that the officials for the game were Clark and Gable from Norwalk but that Clark Gable, multiplied by two aroused no frantic flutter in the hearts of the fair fanettes and quite the opposite of that in the bosoms of the masculine members of the throng.

And immediately after the game the two coaches met in the middle of the floor and exclaimed simultaneously "Did you ever see such lousy officiating in your life?"

"Clark and Gable," mused one mentor, "why they didn't even have big ears—to say nothing of eyes."

Count Fleet Gets Ready for Derby

HOT SPRINGS, Ark —(INS)— Count Fleet champion two-year-old of 1942 and his jockey, Johnny Longden who rode him in all his races were scheduled today to arrive at Hot Springs from Lexington Ky some time next week to train for the Kentucky Derby.

Count Fleet will be shipped here along with 16 other horses belonging to the stable of Mrs. John D. Hertz of Chicago and will be raced at least twice during the winter meeting at Oaklawn Park which opens Feb. 22, according to his trainer, Don Cameron.

Eugene Bury race secretary of Oaklawn announced the track would accommodate as many of the "refugee" turfmen from Florida as space would allow. He said he expected to have 800 horses on the ground when the meeting opens.

SAVOLD AND BOLDEN BATTLE IN CHICAGO

Penguins Win Over Bee Gees

Youngstown Hands Falcons First Loss.

(By Associated Press)

TWO Youngstown college cagers received a major share of the plaudits today for helping hand Bowling Green its first defeat in 15 games this season.

The Youngstown Penguins outplayed the visiting Bee-Gees to win 56 to 53 last night as 2,400 fans witnessed the most startling upset of the Buckeye basketball race to date.

The nip-and-tuck fray featured a battle between a pair of two-man offensive-defensive combinations.

Don Duffey, Penguin guard from East Liverpool, effectively bottled up Wyndol Gray, Bee-Gee forward and the state's leading scorer, while Youngstown's sharp-shooting Leo Mogus sank 10 fielders and five free throws for 25 points. The total ran the Youngstown center's count to 222 in eight contests.

Gray scored only 10 points before Duffey was ejected on fouls late in the second half, but he got nine more before the game ended for a total of 375 in 14 clashes. It marked the first time this season that Gray scored less than 20 points. It was the Penguins' sixth victory in nine starts.

Bowling Green's tumble leaves only Capital and Wilberforce quintets undefeated in Ohio.

In another basketball thriller last night at Cleveland, Kent State edged John Carroll 59 to 57 in two overtime periods in an Ohio conference fray.

Carroll held a 24-21 halftime lead, but the Golden Flashes knotted the count at 36-all in the final minute of regulation play. The first overtime period ended in a 52-all deadlock. The score was tied at 56-all in the second extra frame before Kent State slipped in another fielder. Both teams added another free throw but Kent State kept possession of the ball as the final seconds ticked away, giving them their fifth straight triumph.

Denison lost its third consecutive conference game to Marietta in the Ohio river city. The score was Marietta 61, Denison 48. The Baptists trailed Marietta only 26 to 27 at the half but couldn't keep up as the Pioneers opened up in the second stanza to gain their first loop victory this season.

MICHIGAN FIGHTER MEETS JAKE LAMOTTA

DETROIT —(INS)— Young Charley Hayes of Ferndale, Mich., will get a real taste of big time fighting tonight when he clashes in Olympia with Jake Lamotta, New York middleweight who last week scored a surprise victory over Jackie Wilson.

While Lamotta, in view of his professional record so far, was a decided favorite to stop the 20-year-old Ferndale lad, there were some who believed that Hayes would outbox the New Yorker and gain a decision over the 10-round route.

Hayes only turned professional last April and has fought in but 11 pro fights but Manager Leo Jones believes Hayes will be able to turn back Lamotta tonight.

Dempsey Names Jenkins In Divorce Suit

JACK DEMPSEY MRS. DEMPSEY LEW JENKINS

Ex-Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins and Benny Woodall, a Dallas, Tex., boxing promoter, have been named by Jack Dempsey, ex-heavy champion now a lieutenant commander in the U. S. Coast Guard, in a divorce complaint in which he charges his wife with misconduct, according to the New York Journal-American. Dempsey seeks an absolute divorce from the former Hannah Williams, one-time musical comedy star, as well as custody of their two young daughters, the Journal-American said. The newspaper story said that "Jenkins, according to reports in sports circles, already has felt the shock of the fist that once ruled the world. Dempsey, friends said, knocked him cold when he entered Dempsey's Broadway restaurant."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK—(AP)—Ohio State university is starting a course in "sports appreciation." . . . Preliminary requirement probably is a pocketbook full of stuff that buys $3.30 tickets for football games and $2 tickets at the horse parks . . . Sammy Angott the ex (or is he?) lightweight champion will train for his comeback in his home town of Washington, Pa., where he recently took a physical education job at Washington and Jefferson college. Sammy's duties include giving boxing instruction to 400 soldiers.

CONTEST DEPT.

Branch Rickey says he'd be willing to give a lifetime pass to Ebbets Field to anyone who'd come up with an acceptable emblem symbolizing "Dodgers" that could be worn on Brooklyn uniforms and used in the ads. . . . What he'd like is something like those cocky red birds the Cardinals use.

SHORTS AND SHELLS.

Race horses may have to learn to go barefoot before long, according to Arthur Cragin, vice president of the International Union of Journeymen Horseshoers. With steel and aluminum frozen, there's only enough material on hand to make plates for about eight months. . . . Old Bobo Newsom turned up at the Dodgers' offices the other day, weighing only 221 pounds, and convinced boss-man Rickey that he's still a pitcher and not just trading material.

SERVICE DEPT.

When Lieut. Hank Greenberg visited the Waco, Tex., army flying school recently he got a big hand from his old American league friends Sid Hudson of the Senators, Bruce Campbell, once a Tiger with Hank; Buster Mills of the Indians, and Hoot Evers, who tried out with Detroit last spring. . . . Dick Shackleford and Bruno Hills, who played football at Princeton in 1925 found themselves reunited at an army station in the southwest Pacific And both are majors.

Hoosiers Take On Iowa Five

Undefeated Indiana Chases Illinois Quintet.

CHICAGO—Indiana university takes up its role as a "cage chaser" again tomorrow night when it faces Iowa at Iowa City in the headline game of an abbreviated Big Ten basketball schedule.

In the only other games Ohio State engages Purdue at Lafayette, Ind., and Chicago plays a non-conference encounter with Western Michigan at Kalamazoo, Mich. The remaining Big Ten teams are idle because of term examinations.

Indiana is one of the two undefeated conference quintets, but has gained little recognition for its early season performance because of the attention that has been focused on the drive of Illinois' perfect record combination for a second straight championship.

Iowa wasn't a match for Illinois in a series a week ago and Indiana's engagement with the Hawkeyes should provide some indication of the relative strength of the two league leaders Illinois beat Iowa 61 to 41 and 66 to 34.

If victorious tomorrow night Indiana climbs back into a deadlock for first place with idle Illinois.

While beaten 50 to 48 in its last start by Minnesota, Purdue still is regarded as a dangerous contender. The Boilermakers have one of the season's greatest sophomore finds in Ed Ehlers, a guard. Ehlers has scored 41 points in three league games and pairs with Allen Menke to give "Piggy" Lambert's quintet two top offensive threats. Menke has netted 45 points in conference competition

Ohio State has been a disappointment to date. The Bucks have shown the same erratic tendencies that resulted in their finishing deep in the second division a year ago.

Western Michigan, like all opponents of Chicago, rates as the favorite over the hapless Maroon team.

Crowds Decide Tribe Salaries

Red Embree Ordered To Remain on Farm.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians' pay this year will depend on the crowds they draw.

Most of the contracts to be mailed to players shortly after Feb. 1 will contain clauses providing bonuses based on home attendance, Vice President Roger T. Peckinpaugh said today.

Uncertainties of the forthcoming season prompted this arrangement, whereby Tribesmen will share the hazards with the management. The plan is not new, but never before has been applied to the club generally. In previous years, a few of the standout players—such as Bob Feller—received contracts with bonus clauses based on attendance.

"We haven't any intention of making any general salary cuts," the Tribe's vice president declared, "but we don't know what this year is going to bring and we're going to have to require the ball players to gamble with us.

"If atendance is good they'll havethe chance to make good money. If we don't draw, they'll have the chance to make good This is their war as much as ours, and I don't see how we can operate in any other way"

Pitcher Charles (Red) Embree of the Indians will be out of the lineups this year.

Peckinpaugh announced today that the hurler from California had been given a 2-C selective service classification and would not be permitted to leave his essential agricultural employment. As a result, Embree has been placed on the voluntary retired list.

Brooklyn Gets Sisler As Scout

Rickey Begins To Line Up Dodger Farm Plan.

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)—A system for mass production of ball players will be undertaken by the Brooklyn Dodgers this year in spite of the war—and George Sisler, one of baseball's great all-time first basemen, is to be a kingpin in the setup.

Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers, explained the plan yesterday and said Sisler, who is commissioner of the National Semi-pro Baseball congress, would become a Brooklyn scout to lead the search for talent among the sandlotters.

The plan calls for conducting camps and baseball schools throughout the country in a manner similar to the program Rickey installed with great success for the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It is absolutely opposed to the process of reducing scouting staffs which most clubs are doing," he elaborated, "although it is understandable why clubs which have confined their scouting to the minor leagues would need fewer scouts now. There will be fewer minor leagues.

"We are going into what might be termed the field of free agency scouting. We hope to find some good prospects among the 16 and 17 year olds.

"We are, in effect, betting that the war is over in two years. If it is, this is a corking good program. If the war lasts three years, then maybe we are throwing away a year of scouting.

"But I believe in mass production of ball players. Why in the past I looked at as many as 3,500 young players in one year."

Rickey said he expected to have nine full-time scouts, with Ted McGrew in charge of watching the minor leagues as he was when Larry MacPhail was president of the Dodgers.

The staff will include Bob Finch and Wid Matthews, who were scouts for the Cardinals under Rickey, Fresco Thompson, Tom Greenwade, Tom Downey, Justin Fitzgerald and Dick Fisher.

SIGN WANER, COONEY

NEW YORK — The Brooklyn Dodgers gained a measure of security in the war-time major league player turmoil today with the addition of veteran Outfielders Johnny Cooney and Paul Waner both previously released outright by the Boston Braves.

Faced with a serious shortage in playing talent, particularly in the outfield since Pete Reiser and Rookie Tom Tatum have entered the army and Dixie Walker has signified his intention of quitting, President Branch Rickey signed the two veterans and sold First Baseman Babe Dahlgren.

Waner is a 40-year-old veteran of 17 years in the majors, and Cooney, who is nearing 42, came up to the big time in 1921.

Dahlgren was peddled to Indianapolis of the American Association but curiously enough, Rickey had no explanation why he and other clubs, despite the manpower shortage, had waived the first baseman out of the majors.

Rickey admitted there had been lots of "bidding" for Cooney and added that he also had tried to land the veteran Estel Crabtree, signed earlier in the week by Cincinnati, "but the Reds got there first."

The four new scout additions boost the Dodgers ivory hunting staff to nine.

Billiards Win From Champs

Sferro Lunch Retains First Half Loop Title.

Rex Billiards handed Sferro Lunches their first defeat of the season in the Senior cage league at Friendly House last night, 40-33, but the Lunches retained the first half championship of the league.

Billiards had to stage a second half rally to win, as Sferro's had a 10-8 margin at the quarter and 20-19 edge at the half. Third quarter found the Billiards in front 31-29.

Richards tallied 19 points for the Billiards, and R. Hahn 16 for Sferro's.

MISSED IT MOST

TAMPA, Fla. —(AP)— A Tampa woman complained to her rationing board that her husband had left her and she needed assistance. She didn't want her husband back but he had taken her sugar ration book with him and she wanted help in recovering it. The board excused itself for lack of authority.

WEST WELCOMES FLIERS

ARTESIA, N. M.—(U.P.)—A true Western welcome was given to the officers and cadets of the new Artesia Army Flying school. The entire town of Artesia was decorated in Western style and citizens donned cowboy duds when the new flying school opened.

"...We could no more teach school today without the newspaper than we could have taught it a hundred years ago without the slate."

THIS TRIBUTE to the importance of the newspaper in the classroom is from a recent statement by E. R. Van Kleeck, Assistant Commissioner of Education of the State of New York. His department supervises the education of 2,000,000 children in the nation's largest public school system.

Mr. Van Kleeck is not alone in this view. Educators and teachers throughout the country know that textbooks alone are not enough to prepare today's students for the world of tomorrow. They realize that if the boys and girls in our schools and colleges are to solve tomorrow's problems successfully, they must know and understand what's going on in the fast-moving world of today.

They realize, too, that the newspaper is indispensable in acquiring this knowledge and understanding. For, in the classroom or out of it, the daily newspaper satisfies the need for the news . . . and its interpretation . . . as no other medium can.

In these critical days, all of us . . . young and old, students, teachers and parents . . . are relying on newspapers more heavily than ever before, not only for the news of the day but also for guidance and instruction in waging the war on the home front.

It's not surprising, therefore, that so many advertisers find the newspaper today's most effective medium for presenting their messages to the public.

OHIO INDUSTRY CALLS WOMEN TO MEET SHORTAGE

Ability To Meet War Contracts Hinges on Female Help, Hammond Declares.

By GRANT DILLMAN
(UP Staff Correspondent)

COLUMBUS—Ohio industry today turned to the ladies, seeking the key to a critical manpowe. problem which already has locked war production at present levels in 13 of the state's major manufacturing areas.

Wade Hammond, Ohio director of the U. S. Employment service, said that only a small number of areas have a surplus of ava ilable male labor.

In all other Ohio industrial areas have a surplus of available Ohio war contractors "to deliver the goods" in 1943 hinges upon their ability to get needed manpower—or womanpower.

Hammond said that Ohio's 1,100 major war contractors, now employing more than 1,000,000 persons, must find 161,000 new employes within the next four months to meet production goals.

"With the male labor situation the way it is," he said, "a large proportion of these labor recruits must come from the ranks of women. There just isn't any other way out."

Failure of the ladies to respond in adequate numbers to keep Ohio's war machinery humming, experts predicted, probably would mean curtailment of war contracts in at least four areas and eventually might lead to the allotment of labor on the basis of the industry's importance to the war effort.

Hammond said that because of the critical labor shortage, no new contracts may be let in the Dayton-Springfield and Akron areas unless no other manufacturing facilities are available for a particular type of work.

In 11 other areas, no new contracts can be let unless there are no other facilities for the work and existing contracts may be renewed only if they do not call for additional manpower.

The 11 areas where contract may not be let are Cleveland, Canton-Massillon-Alliance, Fremont-Port Clinton, Sandusky, Columbus, Lima, Lorain-Elyria, Sidney-Piqua-Troy, Hamilton-Middleton, Marion and Warren-Ravenna.

Cincinnati, Youngstown, East Liverpool and the Fostoria-Toledo areas have at least a six-months labor supply. New contracts may be let in the Coshocton, Steubenville, Zanesville and Portsmouth areas where a surplus of labor exists.

Two months ago, Hammond said, 19 per cent of the state's war workers were women. That compared with 16 per cent in September and only 13 per cent in May, increasing evidence that the ladies are pitching in.

"And the percentage is much greater right now," he added.

"A check of employment increases in past weeks by the 1,100 reporting firms indicates that nine of every 10 new employes introduced into industry were women," he said.

"Even the heavy industries — railroads and steel—are beginning to hire women. In many industries, such as leather, wearing apparel and rubber products, the women actually outnumber the men."

As the draft bites deeper into the ranks of married men, the ratio of women in industry will increase further. The Columbus Curtiss-Wright plant, for example, predicts that 40 to 50 per cent of its ultimate employment will be women.

Manpower officials foresee a particularly heavy influx of women into ordnance, transportation and chemical fields. Although the iron and steel industries will take some women, the increase will not be as sharp, they said.

Approximately 11,000 of the 161,000 employes needed will be construction and seasonal employes who will be thrown back on the labor mart.

LONDON RAID CELLARS LOCKED

Populace Unable to Get Into Shelters; Misuse Charged.

LONDON —(AP)— A number of Londoners were unable to get into air raid shelters at the height of yesterday's daylight air raid because the shelters were kept locked to prevent "scandalous misuse," it was revealed in commons today.

Sir William Henry Davison asked Herbert Morrison, minister of home security, whether he was aware that "in yesterday's raids a considerable number of people who ran to the shelters for safety were unable to get shelter by reason of the fact they were locked."

Said Morrison: "The shelters were kept locked owing to scandalous misuse and damage by citizens."

Trombone Stolen — Wilbur L. Collins, who said he lives three and one half miles east of North Liberty, reported to sheriff's officers last night that a trombone was taken from his car when he stopped in Bellville to make a telephone call.

REFUSES DAMAGE

ASHLAND — Jurors found for the defendant today in the $10,000 damage suit of Marguerite Dexter against the Murphy Dor-bed company and the Gilbert Furniture company, which has been on trial here.

The plaintiff alleged, in her action, that she suffered injuries and damages to the extent of $10,000 in 1941 when a bed manufactured by the company, fell from its place in the wall. Because no writ could be served on the Murphy company in Ohio, the Ashland store was the principal defendant in the case.

Lauds Plymouth Man for Loaning War Machinery

The co-operation of a Plymouth garage man in loaning two pieces of equipment necessary to speed production of war materials at a Mansfield industry was cited today by Glenn L. Bierly, president and treasurer of the Mansfield Brass Foundry, Inc., as "an example of the kind of patriotism that will help win the war."

Needing a lathe in a hurry the foundry appealed to the War Production Board, Bierly said, and learned that Ray Dininger had such an instrument in his Plymouth garage. Asked for the loan of the lathe, Dininger not only complied, Bierly explained, but he helped to find a trucker to move the equipment.

In addition to loaning the lathe for the duration Dininger also offered the use of an electric welder to the foundry, a piece of equipment that the foundry urgently needed, Bierly said, but did not anticipate finding so readily.

The loaned equipment is now in operation and Dininger has been informed that proper care will be taken of all tools and "that after this war has been brought to a victorious conclusion all items will be returned in an equally satisfactory condition or fair and reasonable reimbursement will be made.

MEAT ON THE WING

Chickens are playing an important part in feeding our armed forces.

According to a recent estimate of the Department of Agriculture, 13,000,000 tons of chicken meat will be required for all uses this year.

This immense requirement presents a profitable and patriotic opportunity to many people not now contributing to the war effort. Raising chickens is quite simple, and only a small investment is required to get started. Large space is unnecessary, since chickens of these scientific days need never leave the coop.

Crew Forced Sick Marines to Unload Supplies, Charge

AKRON —(AP)— The Beacon-Journal says in a copyrighted story the navy is investigating reports ailing Marines were forced to unload their own supplies when the crew of a merchant ship lying off beleaguered Guadalcanal island refused to work on Sunday because of union regulations.

The Beacon - Journal's story, published in yesterday's editions, quoted six Guadalcanal veterans as declaring the Marines had to take over the Sunday work after the crewmen worked two hours on Saturday and then laid off until Monday morning.

The newspaper did not disclose the identity of the veterans but said the information came from three Marines, two sailors, and a navy pilot on individual visits to Akron

The navy pilot, the paper said, termed the incident the "worst scandal of the war" and said the crew refused to unload supplies because of National Maritime union rules against working on Sunday.

The paper said the veterans' stories "have been put up to naval

CLOSING CASE

State Winding Up Testimony Against Errol Flynn.

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — The state neared the close of its case today in the trial of Actor Errol Flynn on three counts of statutory rape.

Among witnesses the district attorney's deputies said were yet to be called was Capt. Owen Cathcart-Jones, veteran RCAF flier and former technical adviser on aviation pictures, identified in previous testimony as a friend of Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16, chief complaining witness against the actor.

Peggy's sister, Mrs. Mickey June Norris, said the flying captain was a frequent visitor at their apartment while she was living with her sister in Hollywood, that he gave Peggy a dress, slacks and shoes, and that "once or twice" he gave her a small amount of money while both sisters were unemployed.

Army Officials at Loss To Explain Accident That Killed 35 Americans.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — A special board of army air forces officers today was investigating the circumstances surrounding the nation's worst airplane accident which took the lives of 35 Americans, including Author Eric Knight, in Dutch Guiana on Jan. 15.

Army officials were at a loss to explain why the huge four-motored army transport plane carrying the 35 persons—many prominent U. S. officials—crashed into the South American jungles.

Maj. Gen. Harold L. George, chief of the army's air transport command, in the announcement of the crash said that "as far as we know the weather was O. K." indicating that adverse weather conditions did not cause the accident.

George also praised the plane's crew as "one of the best that ever

Few Remain Away From Work, Ask White House: 'What Have We to Gain?'

BULLETIN

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—(U.P.)—The No. 7 Colliery local of the Susquehanna Colliers Co., voted today to return to work in compliance with President Roosevelt's order to end the anthracite strike started Dec. 30.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — (U.P.) — Five-sixths of 12,000 anthracite miners whom President Roosevelt had ordered to end their strike were back at work today.

Only 2,400 carried the strike—for elimination of a 50 cents a month dues increase and a $2 a day wage raise—into a 23rd day.

The miners remaining on strike were members of the No. 7 colliery local of the Susquehanna Company and Exeter Mine local of the Payne Coal company.

The No. 7 colliery local met today to reconsider its stand, but the Exeter local was adamant. It announced it had sent a telegram to the White House, asking, "what have we to gain by going back to work?"

Members of the Exeter local complained additionally that Mr. Roosevelt's back to work order to them had not been signed by him. They meet Monday afternoon to hea Mr. Roosevelt's reply to their message, if he makes one.

Mr. Roosevelt's deadline for ending the strike was noon yesterday, but thus far he had taken no punitive action toward those who defied him, probably because the majority obeyed The White House announced that he was gratified and expected the others to be back shortly.

The United Mine Workers of America (independent), however, went ahead with its plan to punish workers who did not obey Mr. Roosevelt. The UMW had threatened expulsion from the union—which meant that the miners

'NUMBERS' HOUSES RAIDED

Check on Window Smashing at Store Near Scene of Murder

Police today were investigating the breaking of a window in the Peter Such grocery, 328 Grace street, last night, in front of the one-room cabin where George Marginean, 65, a recluse, was killed last Sept. 25. His murder is still unsolved.

Police said today, however, that they had no evidence that would link the window-breaking episode with the murder.

Such told officers that his wife Sophia was awakened about 2 a. m. by the noise of crashing glass but decided the sound came from a nearby freight dock. When the store was opened, it was discovered that a hurled brick had broken a 12-inch hole in a display window glass.

Marginean was found clubbed to death on a bed in his home last fall when Mrs. Such and a son visited his humble cottage with food for the aging man. Marginean lived quietly, with no constant companions, police were told, but efforts were made to find a "tall thin" stranger who had been seen in the neighborhood.

Detectives were baffled in their search for a motive and could not find the club which had been used to crush Marginean's skull. He had lived here about 15 years, following 10 years of railroad labor at Willard after coming to the United States from Rumania, now Axis-occupied, where he still had sons.

One possible piece of evidence found at the murder scene was submitted to the Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratories for analysis and a complete report is on file in the detective bureau here.

A SOUTHEAST BRITISH PORT — (UP) — Great Royal Air Force activity over the English channel was noted this afternoon. Earlier, a spokesman of the inter-Allied supreme command, broadcasting in French over the BBC, warned the population of occupied France today that their territory would become a theater of war operations.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (AP) — British light naval forces attacked the harbor of Tripoli Tuesday night and sank an Italian submarine, the admiralty announced today.

(By Associated Press)

British shock troops were reported to have swept through the main defense works of Tripoli in the climactic battle of Libya today, while on the Soviet front the German high command indicated that the end was near for Nazi divisions trapped before Stalingrad.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters said Russian troops attacking from the west had broken through the lines of the German "defenders of Stalingrad"—the beleaguered force described by the Russians as the remnants of 22 Nazi divisions.

Soviet dispatches have said that the German siege armies originally numbering 220,000 men had been tightly engulfed in the Don-Volga corridor and whittled down to less than 50,000.

Admitting the desperate plight of its troops for the first time, the Nazi command said:

"The German group in the Stalingrad area, which is closely encircled by the enemy and which is offering tenacious resistance to strong enemy pressure, had to wage heavy fighting yesterday against the Soviets, who are storming with far superior forces."

The German war bulletin said that "despite heroic defense," the imperilled Nazis reeled back several kilometers amid bitter hand-to-hand fighting.

On the North African front, columns of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British 8th army were reported by a British broadcast to be storming at the gates of Tripoli, with their big guns in position to pour destruction into the already bomb-blackened city.

Parts of the Axis citadel were reported aflame and much of the civilian population was being evacuated.

The British command asserted that some of the fleeing Axis forces had withdrawn as far as 25 miles inside Tunisia from Libya.

Heavy fighting was also in progress in central Tunisia, suggesting that a showdown battle was developing for the last Axis foothold in north Africa.

The British radio said British field guns were now in positions "on a height commanding the city and harbor of Tripoli, whose main defense works have already fallen."

Italian headquarters said vio-

FORAY: Allied Planes Smash Jap Cruiser at Amboina Base

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A lone Japanese plane bombed the American base island of Espiritu Santo in the Solomons Thursday, the navy reported today, in the first enemy air action directed against that New Hebrides operations center.

(By International News Service)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—Heavy Allied bombers have blasted a Japanese cruiser at the Jap-occupied Netherlands East Indies naval base of Amboina and when last seen the warship was listing and heavy smoke was pouring from it, an official communique said today.

Hits were scored simultaneously on a 5,000-ton Jap merchant vessel and two other Japanese cargo ships were seriously damaged by a force of heavy and medium bombers which attacked the harbor of Rabaul of New Britain island.

During the assault on Amboina, which lies 660 miles north of Port Darwin, Australia, and formerly was the second largest naval base in the Dutch East Indies, a force of 20 Japanese Zero fighters intercepted the Allied raiders. Two of the enemy planes were desfroyed and several others damaged. All of the Allied craft got away safely.

Low-level attacks were made before dawn against shipping in the harbor of Rabaul.

"At least two medium merchant vessels, with estimated tonnage of 2,000 and 6,000 tons each, were seriously damaged," the communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said.

The 6,000-ton ship was damaged

BRITISH ARMY STORMS INTO AXIS CAPITAL

Enters Tripoli as Nazis Admit End Near For Troops at Stalingrad.

lent fighting was erupting around the city. A Morocco radio broadcast said the British 8th army already had entered Tripoli's suburbs.

London quarters said the fall of Tripoli was expected hourly.

"Yesterday our troops continued their thrust westward and by evening were engaging the enemy west of Homs and south of Tripoli," a British communique said tersely.

Homs, 56 miles east of Tripoli, fell to the British Wednesday.

Front-line dispatches yesterday said General Montgomery's vanguards were within 35 miles of the Axis citadel.

British headquarters said Allied warplanes ranged as far west as Ben Gardane, 25 miles inside Tunisia, to attack Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's tattered forces.

The British communique intimated that General Rommel might have been attempting to withdraw some of his troops and equipment from Tripoli by sea, reporting that Allied fliers were constantly battering the city's harbor.

During the last 48 hours, it was announced, Allied planes sank another Axis merchant ship and blasted a tanker off the eastern coast of Tunisia, attacked several small enemy vessels between Sicily and Tunisia, and bombed airdromes in Sicily and Pantellaria.

In addition, three enemy fighters and three German air transports were shot down.

Frontline dispatches said a decisive battle in the great two-way Allied "squeeze" on Axis forces in North Africa appeared near.

While Montgomery's British 8th army swooped down upon Tripoli on the east flank, strong reinforcements of the British 1st army were reported speeding to support the hard-pressed French on the west flank in Tunisia.

Axis Tunisia forces, under the command of Col. Gen. Jurgen Von Arnim, have been attacking the French for several days in the Pont Du Fahs sector, 30 miles below Tunis, in an apparent attempt to prevent the Allies from driving a wedge through to the sea.

Von Arnim's troops were reported to have driven about 27 miles along the highway southwest of Pont Du Fahs to Souk Robaa, thereby throwing a defensive cordon around the coastal route of Marshal Rommel's retreat from Libya into Tunisia.

A French communique broadcast by the Morocco radio said Gen. Henri Honore Giraud's French troops beat off fresh German attacks southwest of Pont Du Fahs yesterday, but the Axis scored new gains farther south of the Kairouan sector, 50 miles below Pont Du Fahs.

The communique said the Germans were attacking with as many as 50 tanks at some points.

Other developments in the global conflict:

WESTERN AIR WAR — Britain's big home-based bombers, perhaps 100 strong, returned to the attack on Germany after a three-night lull, raining havoc on Nazi war foundries in the Ruhr.

The British air ministry said large fires were left raging, but heavy clouds prevent accurate observation of the results. Four RAF planes were listed as missing.

A Berlin broadcast said at least six four-engined Allied planes had been shot down.

It was the 12th raid on Germany this month, following up last week-end's heavy assaults on Berlin.

RUSSIA — Adolf Hitler's headquarters at last admitted the peril of 22 German divisions reported trapped before Stalingrad today, announcing that Soviet troops attacking from the long-besieged Volga metropolis had broken through Nazi defense lines.

The admission indicated that it was the beginning of the end for the beleaguered Nazis.

On the Caucasus front, swift-moving Soviet troops captured the city of Voroshilovsk after a 37-mile advance, clearing the way for a drive against the German stronghold at Armavir and the Maikop oil fields.

Latest advices from Moscow declared the Russians were carving huge chunks out of German defense lines originally established in 1941.

German prisoners transferred to the Russian front from Belgium, were quoted as saying their ranks had been "bled white" during recent battles and that companies now consisted of 10 to 30 men.

Disclose Allied Air Attacks On Sicily

LONDON — (AP) — The Italian high command disclosed today that Allied bombers escorted by fighters had raided numerous targets on Sicily yesterday, raining bombs along the south coast of the island and in the interior.

Points bombed in the Allied sweep included Licata, Porto Empedocle, Gela and Castel Vetrano, according to the broadcast Rome communique recorded here. It declared the raiders "did no damage."

Italian fighters rose to meet the Allied attacks and shot down a bomber and a fighter, the communique said. Anti-aircraft guns were declared to have destroyed two more Allied craft. Five Italian planes were acknowledged lost.

The communique reported Allied planes machine-gunned the railway station at Pachsa, Sicily, and attacked a supply train halted there Wednesday.

officials in Washington for confirmation or denial."

It added that "confirmation has come from a high official source in Washington, who though he witnessed the conditions during his service in Guadalcanal, must necessarily remain anonymous."

The copyrighted story was cleared for publication by the office of censorship, the Beacon-Journal said.

The story quoted one Marine as saying the reason "the supplies were not landed was not because the crew couldn't get them in. The landing boats could have got in, all right.

"There was no opposition from the Japs. We had the landing covered."

One of the sailor informants said the Marines unloaded the supplies because part of the cargo was much needed food.

During the first weeks of action, the boys didn't have enough supplies," he was quoted. "Food was short and so were medical supplies. For a time all the food we got was rice captured from the Japs.

"Our boys weren't interested in waiting over Sunday to get the food that lay just off shore. They just went after it."

In New York, Leo Huberman, NMU director of public relations and education, who said he spoke for Joseph Curran, union president, commented:

"In the first place, the NMU has no union regulation to forbid working on Sunday. In the second place, we are seamen; it is not our job to unload. But in such cases as at Guadalcanal I expect we would be asked to, and I'm sure our men would unload ships."

Coal Output Back to 90 Per Cent of Normal

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. —(AP)— Production of strategic anthracite for the war effort reached more than 90 per cent of normal today with the end of a three-weeks wildcat strike that cost miners an estimated $2,000,000 in wages, withheld approximately 1,000,000 tons from the market and won strikers only the assurance that their wage demand would be considered later.

Only 2,400 of the 23,000 United Mine Workers' members who once participated still were idle and the two local unions representing them announced meetings later today to take back-to-work votes.

Thousands streamed back to their jobs yesterday a few hours before a deadline set by President Roosevelt, who had said the stoppage was endangering the war effort.

Union leaders, estimating the 1,000,000-ton loss and the $2,000,000 missed in wages, pointed out shipments to Canada were halted by government order during the strike and said they feared the industry might never regain the Canadian market, which used 1,000,000 tons last year.

The strikers, demanding a wage bonus to meet war-time living costs and a cut in union dues, gained only UMW President John L. Lewis' promise that he would ask a "wholesome" pay increase when their working contracts expire April 30.

The revolt against Lewis' leadership produced the longest strike in the anthracite fields since 1902.

FARM MACHINE QUOTA BOOSTED

Nelson Cracks Back at Senate Criticism of OCS.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the war production board has authorized a 30 per cent increase in production of farm machinery and in an explanatory statement questioned the fairness of a senate committee's criticism of the previous program.

The WPB action was announced last night. It increases from 137,000 to 187,000 tons the allotment of steel for farm equipment in the first quarter of this year.

He did not think it "fair," Nelson said, "to criticise the office of civilian supply for not having acted in June in the light of a situation which did not develop until long after the 1943 farm equipment program was formulated."

so severely that the Japs made an attempt to beach the vessel.

While the Allied fliers were over Rabaul, principal Japanese air and naval base in the southwest Pacific, they heavily bombed the enemy airdromes there, sending in wave after wave of planes to blast runways, installations and dispersal areas.

A terrific aerial engagement was fought in the skies over Wewak, on the north coast of New Guinea, when a force of 25 Jap Zeros attacked four United States B-24 Liberator bombers. When the battle was done 12 of the enemy craft had been destroyed and six were damaged. All of the American craft returned from the fray.

This battle offered striking proof of the ability of the Liberators to defend themselves against seemingly great odds. The four Liberators fought brilliantly against the Zeros for nearly an hour before the remnants of the Jap force gave up the fight.

Air activity was intensified over the whole southwest Pacific area. In addition to the assaults on Amboina and Rabaul, Allied bombers battered the airdrome at Gasmata, on the south shore of New Britain, and also attacked the airdrome at Lae, New Guinea. The Japs countered with a bombing on the Allied controlled Milne bay area of southeast New Guinea and attempted to raid Port Darwin.

Nine Jap bombers made an attack in the Milne bay area under cover of darkness but failed to inflict any damages. This attempt was followed by a sortie by three enemy planes which raided the Milne bay airdrome from high altitude. Only slight damage resulted and there were no casualties.

Meanwhile Australian and American ground forces maintained battering assaults against Jap units still entrenched in the Sanananda area of Papua.

ASKS CHANGE

Hoover Says Farms Must Be Treated as Arms Plants.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Former President Herbert Hoover says we must envisage agriculture as a munitions industry if we are to support military operations and aid in saving "the world from anarchy after the war."

Addressing the National Industrial conference board last night, Hoover asserted that the United States is exporting less than half the meats and fats to its allies in this war that it did in the last World war but has a greater shortage of these commodities for civilians at home now than then.

He urged that the draft of labor from farms into arms and munitions "cease;" that industry "rigidly economize on labor" to aid the farmer; that large numbers of Mexican farm helpers be temporarily imported and that the possibility of furloughing farm boys from the army during harvest time to draw both army and farmers' pay be considered.

DELAYS ACTION

G. O. P. Marks Time on OK For Muny Court Clerk's Post.

Learning that only one applicant was seeking the Mansfield municipal court clerk's post to be vacated soon by Ralph Hughes, the Richland county Republican executive committee last night declined to make an endorsement for the job.

The lone applicant was Howard May, Mansfield. Ray Hines, previously reported as an applicant for the post, told the committee he was not interested, according to Ralph Hardy, committee chairman.

Hardy said the committee would "wait a few days to see if others apply" and then meet again to consider an endorsement.

Hughes, endorsed by the executive committee for common pleas court bailiff, is expected to take that job when Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch goes to the county bench Feb. 9.

STORK HAS HIS BUSIEST YEAR

But Per Capita Birthrate's Still Below World War Days.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The stork had his busiest year in the nation's history in 1942, delivering at least 2,800,000 babies.

Although the number is greater by at least 200,000 than the previous U. S. record for newborn infants — 2,600,000 in 1921 — the present birth rate of about 21 per 1,000 population is nevertheless below the rate of about 25 registered in the first World war, say statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

The increase, despite a decline in the per capita rate, is due to the growth of the total population, they explained.

foot pipeline and the building of a settling basin at the municipal water company plant.

Council voted a $30,000 appropriation from the municipal electric company funds for the water project and authorized Mayor W. R. Morris to seek federal grants of $135,000 to cover the balance of cost.

According to the Jones survey the only auxiliary water sources in the Shelby area are the Blackfork and Marsh run branches of the Mohican river, each draining areas approximately 19 square miles. The engineers advise impounding of water in the Blackfork, construction of the dam to be 1,300 feet from the Tucker avenue bridge. A pumphouse is proposed for the east bank of the stream to lift the water to the storage reservoir to be built on a 22-acre site above the dam.

Plans provide that the intake pipes would enter the reservoir from the south, forcing the water through the storage basin before it enters a gravity line to the water plant settling basin installation. With 1,800,000 gallons of water impounded by the dam and pumps forcing 8,000,000 gallons daily into the reservoir it is estimated the water plant capacity of 2,000,000 gallons daily can be attained.

The 1939 daily average of water consumption of 389,000 gallons has stepped up to a present use of 580,000 gallons. Two water plant wells now have a daily capacity of 300,000 gallons.

Engineers estimate that completion of the air depot and increased industrial demands will create an average demand for 750,000 gallons of water daily, leaving 450,000 gallons being required from the surface water sources.

Mayor Morris today expressed the hope that all construction be completed by July in order to cope with the rainfall decline usual to August and September.

To accommodate air depot workers Mayor Morris was authorized by council to establish a trailer camp on the water company grounds and the construction of a shower-toilet building providing hot water and electric current.

Councilman Wilbur Workman aided in selecting the trailer site. All trailer permits will be issued by Guy McClane, street commissioner.

Mansfielders today were in receipt of letters from Congressman J. Harry McGregor assuring that the air depot project "is firmly established" in the Mansfield-Shelby area. "I believe in time that this will be a real asset to the community" McGregor declared.

When W. C. Connelly, president of the Ohio Seamless Tube company, announced a week ago he would head a delegation going to Washington to file objections to the depot with war department officials a deluge of telegrams and letters were sent from the Richland county area to McGregor and others urging retention of the depot plans for Richland county.

Asserting that his motives had been misunderstood, Connelly last Monday asked McGregor to cancel Wednesday appointments with government officials. Shelby industrialists had announced that their plants would be imperiled if the town's existing water supply was required to furnish service to the depot

In several other instances, Finefrock said, volunteers prevented from donating themselves by a cold or other reasons, appeared at the center with a friend or relative to act as substitute.

Among the 168 persons appearing for donations 15 were rejected because of colds and various circumstances, the chairman said.

Today's volunteers included people from throughout the entire county headed by a group of 25 from Shelby Red Cross chapter and 13 priests from Sacred Heart Seminary at Shelby Settlement.

Donation hours began at 10:45 a. m. and will continue until 3:45 p. m. The mobile unit will return to Cleveland tonight. Donations made yesterday were returned to the Berea laboratory last night.

human being, and given more food than he has probably had for some time, the Jap undergoes a rapid readjustment. Often he becomes a happy-go-lucky prisoner with a passion for horse-play, cigarets, American slang and swing tunes.

Imagine Tojo's discomfort if he knew his warriors were calling each other "Hachi Maru," which is Japanese for "8-Ball."

This started recently when two marines visited the camp to polish up the Japanese they had studied. One leatherneck called the other an "8-Ball."

A prisoner, who possessed a smattering of English, asked what that meant. When it was laboriously explained, a smile wreathed his puckered features. He said: "Hachi Maru." Within an hour, these words were on the tongue of every prisoner.

Nor would Tojo appreciate the sentiments displayed by another prisoner, when someone mentioned Germany in his presence. With thumb and forefinger of his left hand he gripped his nose firmly, while the right hand shot forward in a Hitlerian salute.

The Jap soldier or sailor knows far less about the war than any man in the uniform of the United Nations. Officers are astounded by the state of general ignorance of world events in which the Japs have been kept.

Army Officials at Loss To Explain Accident That Killed 35 Americans.

sat in an airplane" and he described Capt. Benjamin H. Daily, jr., of Mission, Kan., the ship's pilot, as a "top-notch" flyer.

The fact that there were no survivors of the crash made investigation of the cause of the accident even more difficult for army officials.

Details of the accident were very meager. The war department did not reveal whether army parties had reached the scene of the wreckage or, if so, in what condition they found the plane.

Knight, a major in the army's special services branch, was the author of the best seller "This Above All," and also of "The Flying Yorkshireman." A native of Yorkshire, England, he was a World war I flying ace and recently became an American citizen.

In addition to Knight, the victims of the crash included two ace Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and two U. S. state department officials.

P. E. "Sam" Foxworth, assistant director of the FBI, in charge of the New York office, and H. D. Haberfeld, special agent of the Buffalo, N. Y., office of the FBI, were the two G-men killed. The two state department officials who perished were William Hodson, New York welfare commissioner, and O. E. Henryson, who was on his first mission for the department.

George said that the plane was bound for an overseas destination and some of the passengers were flying to North Africa. The transport aircraft left this country about eight days ago and crashed before it reached its first stop in South America.

Of the 31 other victims, 12 were army officers, six army enlisted men, one an airline physician, two civilian employees of the war department, one an oil company official and nine members of the crew.

INVENTS NAVY LIFE PRESERVER

Ashland Attorney Develops New Type Life Saver For Government.

ASHLAND—Lieut. Com. Lloyd C. Straits, former Ashland attor-ney, now with the U. S. navy at Washington, D. C., is inventor of a knapsack type life preserver, mention of which is made in a re-cent edition of the New York Times.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1943.

"Butter, butter, who's got the butter," is becoming an interesting new game, as the supply continues to shrink.

Use of the American "O. K." has now spread to five continents—and we'll hope that it'll soon be appropriate everywhere.

In time of peace, America neglected to prepare for war—but there seems to be plenty of ideas on how to prepare for peace.

Subs Continue as Strong Weapons

AS WAR NEWS becomes more encouraging for the Allies in the success of land operations, a steadily increasing emphasis on growth of the enemy submarine menace is being noted—and it should be generally realized that destruction of shipping by subs must be greatly reduced before there can be any feeling of confidence that victory is being approached.

This point was stressed in the panel discussion in Mansfield yesterday when Spencer D. Irwin, Dr. C. Langdon White and George P. Michaelides, of Cleveland, were here for a meeting sponsored by the Mansfield Federation of Women.

A big "if" was introduced by Irwin in considering the possibility of defeating Hitler by the end of this year. It was "IF we overcome the sub menace."

As matters now stand, according to Irwin, the Nazis are sinking more ships than we can build, and are steadily adding to the number of subs that are prowling the oceans. Not only are ships sunk, and many members of their crews lost, but vast quantities of badly needed war supplies are also prevented from reaching Russia and other allies.

Aerial bombings of Germany, effective as they may be, have thus far failed to reach submarine production centers to such extent as to seriously hamper production. There has been some success in destroying subs, but not in sufficient numbers to prevent quick replacement and increase in the total of Hitler's underseas destroyers.

The convoy system is the best way yet devised to combat submarine attacks, but enough ships are not available to carry this through in a complete way.

Optimism as to any quick winning of the war will not be justified until the problem of dealing with enemy subs has been more nearly solved than it now is.

War Makes a Great Difference

SERIOUS attention is being given by the state legislature to the matter of whether Ohio should be on Central or Eastern standard time, because War time places clocks an hour ahead of whichever it is.

Lieutenant Governor Herbert yesterday expressed doubt as to the legislature's authority to make a change while the state is under federal wartime regulation. He also questions whether such action would be "proper or patriotic."

Proponents contend that the change should be made to Central standard time "because the people of Ohio want it done"—but that doesn't seem impressive as a wartime attitude.

People are finding out, in a variety of ways, that "what they want" makes little difference while there's a war being fought, and that the real consideration is whether or not a regulation or restriction is helpful to the war effort.

Right or wrong, it has been decided by duly authorized agencies of federal government that so-called "daylight saving" by setting clocks an hour ahead, is beneficial in saving electric current, and approval by the War Production Board would seem to be a necessary preliminary before any time change could be properly, patriotically or constitutionally made in either Ohio or Michigan—in both of which states the subject is arousing lively interest.

Publisher Sees Danger Ahead

AT A TIME when functions of government and powers of its boards and bureaus are growing so rapidly that no man knows how great they are, and when they are actually usurping functions of the courts, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of the New York Times, told 200 Detroit automotive and advertising executives that the press of America and industry must guard the fundamentals of our system of free enterprise against encroachment of government. Mr. Sulzberger said:

"I cannot over-emphasize the power and authority piling up in Washington. I would be derelict if I were not to point out that there are those in my opinion who seek to use the smokescreen of America's foreign wars to promote and forward their American revolution.

"We of the press must be alert to protect the fundamentals of our system of free enterprise. You must be preparing to show the people of this country what industry can and will do for each man, woman and child in the community when our major task is completed, far away as that goal still is."

The men of industry must keep ahead of the procession in helping prepare a sound plan, said Mr. Sulzberger: "Let us paint it in all the colors of our genius—new houses, new cars, new education, new opportunity of every kind.

"That's what democracy offers when we, the people, do it. And to do all that, we need a free press."

Real statesmanship, industrial and labor leadership, and an informed public must cooperate to see that the United States remains the land of individual opportunity.

Reserve Right To Criticize

THE AVERAGE young American, entering the army, finds many things to which he is not accustomed. One is the rule of saluting every officer he meets. True, the officer salutes him in return, but the enlisted man must do it first. Rightly or wrongly, this seems to some to savor of a caste system, and many soldiers do not like the idea. It is defended as an important aid to discipline, but even this explanation does not always satisfy.

The German practice is different. All German soldiers salute each other, not merely their officers. They are thus made to feel that they are part of a privileged fraternity. And whatever else has been said of the German army, no one has ever suggested that it lacks discipline.

Germans, however, cannot voice any dislike of army methods. Our soldiers can and do, and on the whole they like their own ways better.

Preferred pronunciation: "The nation must ration," not "It's the fashion to ration."

Public Demanding Labor Curbs

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Talks with senators and representatives do not indicate that there will be any labor legislation this session, either with respect to wages—with a view to preventing inflation—or with regard to strikes—to prevent slowing down of war production and complicating the manpower situation.

That is the present prospect. But it may change.

It may change because if one per cent of the stories being brought back to Washington are true there is likely to be a wave of public opinion demanding curbs on labor, comparable only, in recent history, to the sudden reversal of public opinion about prohibition between 1928 and 1932.

Actually, this possible wave of public opinion in favor of labor curbs, if it comes at all, will be much more savage than that which brought about repeal of the prohibition amendment.

A MOTHER whose boys have been killed in North Africa, or on New Guinea, is more apt to be violent about slow-down labor practices, and strikes in munitions plants, than her husband was when he got excited, in the late twenties, about the beer mobs and corruption of officials.

Of course there were parents in the twenties who were aroused to a frenzy against prohibition when their sons died of poisoned liquor—the poison put in by government decree and ineffectually removed by moonshiners trying to make a dishonest dollar. But the number of these was only a drop in the bucket compared to the number of American parents, in every state of the Union, in constant dread of hearing that their sons have perished.

One might have suspected that the coal strike would have been enough to provoke this wave of sentiment. But in the first place, the American people are patient. They do not mind suffering a little if they think any good is to be gained. And never forget that the present generation has been brought up to regard the fight of labor against "special privilege" as something very well worth encouraging.

But there are stories which are calculated much more to produce indignation than the coal strike. Few people connect up coal they burn to keep warm with the war effort, no matter how much evidence there is to that effect.

But how about the story of a union official in a Buffalo plant who reprimanded a man who was polishing 200 gun barrels a day, telling him that 100 was the quota for a day's work?

In another plant where women recently replaced men on a given operation in the production of fighting equipment, the average for the men had been in the neighborhood of 900 units per man per day. The women have run the average up to around 2,000 units.

FOR YEARS union labor has fought every efficiency system. Their lobbies sought the prohibition of the Taylor stop watch system in all plants favored with army and navy orders thirty years ago, just before the outbreak of the last war. Women, going into war plants in a blaze of patriotic enthusiasm, have no use for the old union doctrine that no man must be worked fast.

Maybe the answer is government ownership of all war plants, and drafting, at soldiers' pay of all employes. But SOMETHING is going to pop if the war continues much longer.

Tojo's Cold Holds Up Parliament's Opening

—By GLENN BABB

THE JAPANESE parliament was to have convened yesterday to hear Premier General Tojo and his colleagues outline the government's policies. Usually this day—on which the two houses resume business after the long new year recess—is the most important of the annual session.

The ministerial declarations correspond roughly to the American president's annual message to congress on the state of the nation: This is the one occasion each year when the ministers make a more or less clean breast of things to the country.

But the Tokyo radio says Tojo has a cold and therefore the reopening has been postponed to next Wednesday. Now this is highly unusual, although Tojo, who is war minister as well as premier, is a more important man than most of his predecessors, it does not seem that his cold is sufficient explanation of a six-day postponement of an important parliamentary session.

The situation, against the background furnished by recent Tokyo broadcasts, suggests strongly that there is a crisis of some kind on that hilltop in the heart of Tokyo where the premier's residence, parliament, general staff offices and the war ministry are grouped. Perhaps the recent announcement that the government has drafted bills to give the premier new and unprecedented powers holds the explanation.

On the surface it would appear that Tojo, who has come up from obscurity within the last five years, was trying to make himself a dictator on the Mussolini pattern. But such a simple explanation does not fit the Japanese way.

Distrust of individual dictatorship is deep rooted in the Japanese political mind.

Tojo holds his present position of great power not as an individual but as the member of the ruling military caste whose assignment happens to be command of the home front.

What is sought now is more power for the army's representative in the government, not for Tojo the individual, to wipe out the possibility that any minister could hamper the army's plans. Where such opposition might come from is not clear.

The chief emphasis obviously is on war production, an emphasis that becomes almost frenzied as the realization grips the militarists that Japan is tremendously overmatched in this phase.

The picture thus vaguely outlined seems to mean that the army is determined to take totalitarian control of all productive capacity and run it in such a way that the result will be victory or utter ruin.

Match Economy

A MATCH may be a small item in itself, but the American public uses more than 500 billion annually, 45 per cent of them book matches. This volume of production requires 70 to 80 million board feet of lumber annually for splints, and 500 tons of steel a year for the staples that hold the book matches together.

The match industry is conserving paper, manpower, and chemicals in match production, and has been making paper matches largely from salvage paper.

To encourage further conservation, match manufacturers and WPB are considering various methods of saving matches and vital materials used in their production. These include:

1. Reducing length of the staples, thus saving 20 per cent of the steel wire required, or about 100 tons of steel annually.

2. Reducing length of wooden matches by a quarter of an inch, thus saving about 7 million board feet of wood.

3. Eliminating all "frills" on book matches, including varnishes and lacquer finishes.

Long and Difficult Struggle Ahead Before African Victory Is Gained

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

THE ALLIED conquest of all Libya is on the verge of completion and both sides are getting set for the final battle of Africa in northeastern Tunisia.

It obviously will be a difficult struggle and probably a long one. The beaten Afrika Korps of Marshal Erwin Rommel is not expected to attempt a stand at Tripoli, or to have any desire to do so. As viewed by London observers, his only aim is to effect a junction with the army of Gen. Hans Arnim in Tunisia.

An attempt to evacuate by sea from Tripoli is considered highly improbable. The Allied blockade would make it hazardous and moreover, Hitler wants to strengthen his forces in Africa, not weaken them by withdrawals.

From the way the fighting in Tunisia is going currently, it does not seem likely that the Allies can prevent a junction of the two forces. Allied attempts to drive through to the coast at Sousse and erect a wedge between the Axis armies have failed. The Axis is currently making a strong attack southwest of Tunis, in the vicinity of Pont Du Fahs and Bou Arada, seeking to enlarge their hold on the area where the final stand will be made.

It is possible, even probable, that Rommel's army will attempt a stand on the Mareth or "Little Maginot" line which runs southward from the sea near the Libyan-Tunisian border. This strongly-fortified system was built by the French. Although they were ordered to dismantle it after the fall of France, the extent of demolition is problematical, besides which the Germans have had time to restore it.

ULTIMATELY, however, Rommel is expected to withdraw to the northeastern corner of Tunisia. While he is estimated to have lost about 75 per cent of his tanks and mechanized equipment in the 1,000-mile flight across Libya, it is believed he can add upwards of 50,000 men to Arnim's forces, making a total Axis army of perhaps 120,000 to 150,000 men.

Such an army could put up a sturdy fight in the defendable Tunis-Bizerte area and might be able to hold the entire coastal region from Sfax to Bizerte for months.

The Axis has the advantage of shorter communication lines and some strongly-defended positions. To offset this, the Allies, superior at sea and in the air, are harrying their lines and so far this week have sunk 18 Axis ships. The Allied air force is blasting Axis-held ports and communication lines with devastating effect.

The eventual outcome in Africa can scarcely be in doubt, however. The Allies will be able to outmatch in manpower and equipment anything Hitler can get across the Mediterranean.

Hitler lacks the necessary planes and men. His position in Russia is grave and he does not dare make further withdrawals from that front. In fact, it is reported from Stockholm that some of the battle planes sent from Russia to the Mediterranean have been sent back to Russia.

Slicing Bread, Etc.

—By MARJORIE R. BROOK

(Editor's Note—"Thoughts While Slicing Bread" might be an appropriate caption for this letter, written by Mrs. Clark W. Brook, 201 Euclid avenue, and it is interesting to note that Mrs. Brook can not only slice bread, but that she can also BAKE it. Her ideas about rationing, hoarding, and the other subjects on which she touches, are worth reading and thinking about.)

AT LONG LAST Mrs. Housekeeper has found that there is a place for her in the war effort! To those who have been asking "What can I do to help?", the OPA has very thoughtfully answered "You can slice your own bread." So with a patriotic zeal the housewife cheerfully wields the bread knife, while she whistles "Remember Pearl Harbor." Of course it's not as exciting as riveting or being a WAAC—but it's something. And if slicing our own bread will bring victory to the Allies and defeat for the Axis—I'm all for it! I am even baking my own bread and slicing it (6 loaves this week) which makes me feel twice as patriotic. (Note to Editor—and I'm not a Grandmother as your editorial suggests, and I can slice it very even and paper thin.)

If someone in the OPA had time to dream up this just for the housewife, surely among their personnel they have a man with enough intelligence and foresight to do something about the food situation. Their worries about hoarding and the black market would have been eliminated by the simple expedient of declaring rationing "effective tonight at midnight" instead of announcing it weeks and months ahead. It would have meant secret and detailed work for them preparing for the deadline—but it would have been much simpler and less confusing to the public.

SELF PRESERVATION is inherent to such an extent that it is quite natural to stock up on items which are announced as next on the rationing list. The housewife feels a tremendous obligation in feeding her family—and the government has done little to educate us to the fact that we must feel just as responsible for the feeding of our fighting men and our Allies.

We should be told why in clear, simple, easily understood sentences. We should be given facts and pictures, shocking and brutal. We are so far away from the unpleasant aspects of this war, so smugly content in our own pleasant security, that we lack sufficient imagination to see what our men and Allies are facing.

I do not believe there is anyone of us who would be stouthearted enough to hoard food, to buy in black markets or even go on strike if we could see actual pictures (not Hollywood movies) of our soldiers taking it on the chin at Pearl Harbor, Bataan, Wake Island and in concentration camps, fever-ridden jungles and infested swamps. And our gallant Allies giving their all at Dunkirk and Dieppe—and civilians, just ordinary people like you and me, dying in the streets from starvation, shot in mass murders and tortured beyond all hope of sanity.

These are not pleasant pictures to contemplate! I wonder if we could stand the truth, in its stark, brutal reality! And aren't we luckier than we deserve, to be spared it all? And no matter how much the war costs each of us personally, can it ever be enough to recompense those who are defending our democracy and our freedom with their very lives?

BUT lets give credit where credit is due! To the hundreds of Mansfield housewives who are buying normal, sensible amounts of food and who are substituting without complaint, whatsoever is available for those hard-to-get items. And let's give the grocer and the butcher a pat on the back for voluntarily helping to reduce runs on food by limiting quantities. Their business life has become very complex and it is to their credit that they have been able to maintain their composure and unfailing good nature.

And how about a great big orchid to each of the Mansfield bus drivers? What a hectic life they have had the past few weeks! In spite of the tremendous responsibility of transporting maximum numbers of riders, they have done so with absolute safety regardless of the most hazardous driving conditions. And they have been cheerful and very accommodating through it all.

So thinking it all over I can go back to slicing my bread, with the cheerful thought that Mansfield is really doing its bit.

Timely Editorial

Patriotic Restraint.

Almost anyone of us can be honest except when face to face with temptation, and then some of us fail.

Here is this question of hoarding supplies that will be rationed about Feb. 1. There is hardly anything in the list that is not to be desired by the average family.

Those responsible for the administration of regulations having to do with the rationing of foods have not been backward in admonishing people to refrain from the veil of hoarding, and the appeal is based on the broad suggestion that patriotism demands such restraint.

Refrain from doing that which one might be disposed to condemn in others. Don't hoard.—Detroit News.

Hints on Etiquette.

There will be a real rush to get aboard the band wagon if Hitler continues to look as bad as he has for the past few months. Before he gets through he will have to use a mirror to establish a quorum.

* * *

It's a little disturbing to see how easily public men do some things without bothering to get the facts. Right on the heels of the release of a labor leader after serving a few months of a long prison sentence, by an executive who admits he didn't have all the facts, Mr. Flynn now tells a senate committee that he didn't know who "Dutch" Schultz, notorious gunman, was when he made him a special deputy sheriff with a badge and everything.

* * *

Secretary of State Hull didn't get over to indorse Mr. Flynn as ambassador to Australia but sent an assistant who said Mr. Flynn was qualified through the fact he had been a prominent figure in the Flushing world's fair. I should think that made Billy Rose and Mike Todd eligible for diplomatic posts. Not to mention Salvador Dali, all them underwater nymphs and maybe the trylon and perisphere.

Pointed Paragraphs

If a man has one little vice it hides lots of big virtues from the eyes of his neighbors.

A Farmer's Diary

Why He Can Pitch

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IT HAPPENED out in Van Meter, Iowa, that a farm boy of 17 made all the athletic world wonder when, at such a tender age, he signed a contract with the Cleveland Indians. No one, before, had even been given such a splendid break at 17, or carried so much responsibility.

Before Bob Feller was born, William Feller, his father, dreamed of success in the baseball field. He loved the sport, and he was pretty good, but an average farmer, on a busy Iowa farm, has little time for practice. Only when his son was born, the old desire for success on the diamond was reawakened. Before Bob was seven, his father was tossing balls to him, using the old barn as back stop. The boy gained rapidly in skill and the game became a passion with them both. When the lad was eight, Feller converted the hog lot behind the barn into a baseball diamond. They took time out to scrape and level it.

At 12, Bob was a better player than his father. Competition arose among country boys for miles around, who organized and came to play on Feller's diamond. When he was 15, Bob was the champion pitcher of the neighborhood. Constant practice was rewarded with ever increasing skill and precision.

Then, one day, Cy Slapnicka, official scout for the Indians, watched him pitch. The scout was delighted and thrilled—he had made a discovery . . .

Bob Feller was a favorite among his teammates. His skill in the pitcher's box, his honest ways of thinking, his homey modesty, and his unassuming manners and farmerish walk were in his favor.

During four short years, Bob Feller accumulated enough money to purchase a $25,000 home for his parents.

A few days ago his father died, at 54, but not before he had realized, in his illustrious son, an ambition which he could not reach, himself. A man with a son always has two chances of reaching his goal, and William Feller had improved his opportunity.

Bob Feller, as most of you know, is "in there pitching" now, for Uncle Sam's navy and for the whole free world.

HAGER-OBERLIN RITES PERFORMED THURSDAY

Rev. David N. Roller Reads Ceremony Before Altar Decorated With Palms, Lighted Tapers And Flowers In Beauty Baskets.

THE altar of First Presbyterian church was decorated with palms, lighted tapers in two seven-branch candelabra, and two beauty baskets of Picardy gladioli and yellow Garcia pompons, for the wedding ceremony of Miss Catherine Hager and Cpl. Charles Robert Oberlin, which was performed by Rev. David N. Roller at 4:30 p. m., Thursday.

Before the ceremony Miss Mabel Zehner, organist, played a ten-minute recital which included "Dreams," by McAmis, Liszt's "Liebestraume," and "Because," by D'Hardelot.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mathias Hager, approached the altar to the familiar strains of the Bridal Chorus from Wagner's opera, "Lohengrin." Carrie Jacobs Bond's "I Love You Truly," was played softly during the ceremony, followed by Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

The new Mrs. Oberlin wore a street-length frock of winter white wool, a black faille hat, trimmed with ashes of roses, and a shoulder-length Parisian green veil. Additional color was added to the costume by her Parisian green suede sandals. Her bridal bouquet was of pink Briarcliff roses with an arrangement of greenery.

Her sister, Mrs. John Imler, was maid of honor, wearing a soft green Botany flannel suit, with white crepe blouse, and black accessories. Her flowers were Johanna Hill roses.

Richard D. Hinshaw, close friend of the couple, served as Cpl. Oberlin's best man.

The bride's mother appeared at the ceremony in a brown silk crepe dress, with matching accessories, and a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Oberlin, the bridegroom's mother, wore a black ensemble, with white accessories and a gardenia corsage.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served in the club room at the Mansfield-Leland hotel to 20 members of the immediate families and close friends. The long table was made attractive with lighted tapers, floral arrangements, and a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and soldier. Baskets of pink and yellow flowers decorated the room.

In the evening Cpl. and Mrs. Oberlin left for Columbus where they will visit for several days before going to Dayton where they will reside. For traveling Mrs. Oberlin wore a British tan Botany flannel dress with aqua trim, a tan hand-crocheted felt hat, with grosgrain trim, and dark brown accessories.

The new Mrs. Oberlin the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Hager, 742 McPherson street, is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school, and has been employed in the bookkeeping department of the Ohio Public Service company.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)
